Note Clears Mystery of Girl's Leap to Death

STOP TERRORISM, HITLER ORDERS

Today

More From Germany.
The Kaiser's Praise.
Heads Still Rolling.
Vatican Resentment.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

STILL THE NEWS is from Germany, everything else dwindles. Old President Hindenburg congratulates all the survivors. Some of the dead may be better off than the living.

According to Universal Service, Roehm, who had fought at the side of Hitler since the beginning, did not commit suicide. Left with a loaded revolver in his prison cell, he refused to kill himself and, after being given "ten minutes more," was shot down by a firing squad.

THE FORMER KAISER expresses amazement at Hitler's energy and strength. He says Hitler is "stronger than ever." It is clear the Chancellor does not lack strength of will or swiftness of execution. Before he had seized complete power he predicted "heads will roll." They are rolling, and Hitler's head man, Goebbels, predicts that "more heads will roll."

THE POPE'S GOVERNMENT in the Vatican resents, bitterly, and naturally, the statement that Heinrich Klausner, head of the Catholic Action party in Berlin, has committed suicide. An official of the Vatican recalls that "only recently Klausner made a noble speech to Berlin Catholics, which was read with deepest satisfaction by the Vatican." The Vatican official, quoted by International News Service, adds:

"We must strongly protest against the attempt to camouflage murder as suicide, since the Catholic religion forbids suicide. Militants, like Klausner, would not dream of taking their own lives."

The same official said further:

"It is deplorable that, not content with killing their adversary, the Brown Shirts threw mud at his noble figure."

THE SHOOTINGS, suicides, arrests and denunciations in Berlin recall days of the French revolution when Mirabeau, treacherously serving the Royalist party, would have been guillotined had not death taken him first; Danton, the intellectual force of the revolution, was executed by Robespierre.

Robespierre in turn was guillotined, his jaw broken so that he coud not talk at the last, very painful for a revolutionist. Marat, the last that rose to power, was butchered in his bath by the French girl Charlotte Corday, and at last Napoleon came to put them all at work killing people in other countries, for his glory.

HITLER ANNOUNCES that the soldiers in his troops must be one hundred per cent pure and moral or at least refrain from the viler forms of degradation. That was not the idea of Napoleon to whom is credited the saying, "The worse the man, the better the soldier. If soldiers are not corrupt, they ought to be made so."

Samuel Johnson said "Every man thinks meanly of himself for not having been a soldier or not having been at sea." If reports from Berlin are correct, no man need think meanly of himself for not having been a soldier of the type that Hitler has been shooting recently.

WHAT IS TO happen? Hitler had built his tower high, stood on the top, while Germany held its peace, or shouted: "Heil, Hitler!" giving the Nazi salute. That tower appears to be crumbling at the bottom, undermined by inside treachery.

Suppose it falls and Hitler crashes with it, what next? There is only too good reason to fear that savage atrocities and reprisals might ensue, massacres on a big scale, not only of Germans of Jewish blood, of whom Hitler had tried to make national scapegoats, but also of other Germans guilty of achieving success, or possessing wealth.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN politically if old Hindenburg proves mistaken in his message to Hitler, "You have saved the German people from grave danger?" Suppose they are not saved?

The former Kaiser says Hitler's power "is now at its highest."

Suppose the next step is the downward plunge. What then?

All serious politicians in Europe ask themselves that question.

THE POPE has abandoned for the time his plan of departure from the Vatican for his cool villa on the heights, and will remain in spite of his seventy-five years, enduring the intense heat

U. S. THREAT CHARGED BY WEIRTON

Boycott 'Club' Used By Federal Officials, Steel Firm Says

WILMINGTON, Del., July 3.—(AP.)—A charge that "certain government officials" are threatening a boycott against the Weirton Steel Company was made in U. S. District Court today by Earl F. Reed, of Pittsburgh, counsel for the company.

Reed's statement was made during argument on 50 interrogatories filed by the government in its suit for an injunction to restrain the Weirton company from interfering with the balloting of its employes for collective bargaining representatives. He declined to name the officials when asked to do so by Lawrence Fly, government counsel.

A final hearing on the petition for the injunction is scheduled to start September 5.

Judge John P. Nields asked for some definite assurance that the issue will be prosecuted then. Attorney Fly replied that as far as he knew the hearing will go on as scheduled.

Weirton counsel objected to filing the answers requested by the government, particularly one which would include a loss of 50 of the company's largest customers, the tonnage shipped to them and the dollar value of the shipments.

The government said the information is needed to establish its contention that the company is engaged in interstate commerce, but Reed intimated he believed there was an ulterior motive back of it. Fly openly expressed resentment and demanded that Reed withdraw the innuendo or substantiate it with fact.

Decision on the interrogatories was reserved.

Farm-Bound

LYNN FONTANNE

Miss Fontanne, the actress, today with Husband Alfred Lunt, the actor, on her way straight from New York's docks to their Wisconsin farm after pausing only long enough to tell of how the British, satisfied that the depression is over, are spending money for gaiety.

NOTE CLEARS GIRL'S LEAP TO DEATH

Friend Views Body in Morgue, Identifies Span Victim

After lying unclaimed in the county morgue for 24 hours, the body of the "mystery woman" who jumped off the lofty Wilmot Street Bridge in Schenley Park was identified this afternoon as that of Mrs. Grace Oliver, of 203 Coltart avenue.

The identification was made by Mrs. Beatrice Schwartz, of the Fairfax Hotel, a former roommate of Mrs. Oliver, who read in the Sun-Telegraph a description of the dead woman and then visited the morgue, where she viewed the body.

Mrs. Schwartz said her friend formerly had been employed by the Duquesne Club as a waitress, but had been unemployed for several months.

SUICIDE NOTE

The woman left a note, in which she said life was "too much" for her.

The note:

"Goodbye Mommy. Life got too much for me so I am taking the easiest way out. All my things are yours and I wish you would do me one favor. I want Bill to have the picture over the mantel and Mealy my necklace set.

"Tell Ann it's something to remember me by. I want to thank you for being so kind to me, but please don't feel sorry to me because this is the best way out.

"GRACE.

"I don't want my people to know about this, please."

WALKS TO BRIDGE

Another roomer in the house where the waitress lived said she left home about noon yesterday and apparently walked directly to the Wilmot Street Bridge, wrom which he leaped 110 feet onto the tracks of the B. & O. Railroad.

Mrs. Schwartz said Mrs. Oliver was married but had been separated from her husband for some time. She was also known as Mrs. Grace Clifford.

Morgue officials last night received an anonymous call, identifying the leap victim as "Mrs. Clifford," but the woman caller refused to give her own name and the police were unable to verify the identification before Mrs. Schwartz made it positive.

Replacing Von Papen

GEN HERMANN WILHELM GOERING . . . . HITLER'S AIDE

Dapper Gen. Goering, Chancellor of Prussia—he who designs his own many splendid-looking, finely-made militaristic uniforms—today assured of appointment by Reich Chancellor Hitler, whose chief aide he is within the Nazi party, as Reich Vice Chancellor to succeed Franz von Papen, expected to resign shortly.

FLIES TO HINDENBURG; FATE OF VON PAPEN UNSETTLED

BULLETIN

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, July 3.—Chancellor Hitler boarded an airplane for Neudeck, home of President Paul von Hindenburg, tonight at the conclusion of an important cabinet session, leaving the disposition of the Vice Chancellory unsettled.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, July 3.—Chancellor Hitler issued an order today putting an end to special measures used to quell the "second revolution," and announced that henceforth the regular courts of justice will handle offenders against the Nazi regime.

The order was made effective July 1.

An end to extreme suppresive measures, together with assurance of the appointment of Hermann Wilhelm Goering as Vice Chancellor of Germany and the resignation of Franz von Papen as Hitler's chief aide focussed the eyes of the nation on Berlin.

Two groups were in conference to determine the further fate of the fatherland. One was an important session of the cabinet in Chancellor Hitler's offices, where the von Papen resignation was being discussed. Another was a meeting of the inner council of the Nazi party.

From Munich was reported the strongly rumored death of Gustav von Kahr, the Bavarian premier who turned against Hitler after plotting with him in his 1923 "beer putsch."

PRIESTS THREATENED

Other developments in the tense German scene included:

1—Hundreds were reported to have been executed in the ruthless drive against government foes, waged principally in ranks of the Storm Troops.

2—A threat that Nazi bullets "would not be spared" when the time is ripe for execution of Catholic priests was voiced at Ratibor by Helmut Brueckner, governor of Silesia. News of his speech greatly alarmed Berlin Catholic circles.

3—The newspaper Deutsche Zeitung charged "It must be clear to every National Socialist that Jews have their hands in this conspiracy against the leader (Hitler)."

4—The Storm Troops, until recently all-powerful, were given a significant blow when their press department was abolished.

PRIEST REPORTED SLAIN

It was reported there that Nazi vengeance had claimed the life of a Catholic priest, Father Muhler,

International News Service.

BERLIN, July 3.—Germany was stirred today by reports that the former Crown Prince Freidrich Wilhelm and his brother, Prince August Wilhelm, had been ordered to leave the country within three days.

The Crown Prince was reported already en route to Doorn, Holland, to join his father, the former kaiser, in exile. This, however, was denied at Doorn by a secretary.

Prince August Wilhelm, fourth son of the ex-Kaiser, known as "Auwi," was reported still in Berlin.

The agitation against the two sons of the House of Hohenzollern was understood to have been based on the accusation that they were linked with Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, former Chancellor, who was shot while "resisting arrest." The government charged he was plotting restoration of the monarchy.

It was reported that "Auwi" was badly frightened. He was a member of the staff of Capt. Karl Ernst, commander of the Berlin Storm Troops, also executed.

"Auwi," it was learned, was called before Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and new "strong man" of the Hitler regime, who is said to have given a tongue lashing to the kaiser's cowed and trembling son, asserting:

"If you had any sense you would blow out your brains. But you haven't, so you had better go home to bed."

BIRDMEN DERBY JUDGES NAMED

Six judges have been named for the Sun-Telegraph Model Plane Derby to be held next Saturday afternoon in South Park.

Haddock, recreation supervisor of county parks; Lieut. Corley McDarment, commandant of Rodgers Field; Hal T. Bazley manager of the municipal airport; Dr. R. E. Earp, of the staff of West Penn Hospital, and Miss Helen Richey and Miss Helen MacCloskey, local fliers.

Special bus rates have been arranged to operate between the Brentwood car loop and the fair grounds. The meet will start at 12:30 p. m. Thousands of persons from the district, including members of the Junior Birdmen, will attend.

Marie Dressler Eats Solids, Hope Lacking

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 3.—(AP.)—Physicians still found no hope for Marie Dressler's recovery, but the 62-year-old film star had improved to such a degree today that she was able to take solid food.

Physicians, treating her for complications of uremic poisoning and cancer which brought her close to death last Thursday, said it was the first time in two weeks that she had been able to digest anything except liquid nourishment.

VATICAN CITY, July 3.—(INS.)—Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, had a half-hour audience today with Pope Pius, who evidenced special interest in the campaign in the United States against improper motion pictures.

3 BANK CALLS MADE BY U. S.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Comprehensive information revealing the condition of virtually every licensed bank in the United States as of June 30 will be available as a result of three bank calls issued by the Treasury today.

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, issued the first call of the New Deal for all state banks, members of the temporary insurance system but not affiliated with the Federal Reserve system.

His call coincided with the joint calls issued by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor for the condition of national banks, by the Federal Reserve system for state member banks.

Crowley explained his call will provide more accurate information so that the corporation "might better be able to discharge responsibility to protect the nation's bank depositors."

Crowley added it is not the intention of the corporation to burden banks with requests for data and reports nor to issue calls except "when absolutely necessary."

WIFE OF CHIEF DIES BY GUN

Chief Kane told Chief Deputy Coroner James L. Davidson, the latter reported, that he had heard no shot and that he found his wife, her face smeared with blood, at 6 a. m. when he awoke, in the same bed.

'GHOST' KILLER ELUDES HUNT

International News Service.

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 3.—A $5,000 reward was posted by the Wheeling Steel Corporation today for the capture dead or alive of the phanthom killer who has raided its mills three times, leaving in its wake three dead and one wounded.

Jefferson County commissioners, outraged by the bold attacks on the mill yards, also posted a $1,000 reward.

Spurred on by the rewards, posses of private dectectives and peace officers of the city and county desperately pushed the hunt for the killer.

The steel corporation, leaving no stone unturned to protect its workers and bring the maniac to justice, also hired a staff of undercover agents in an attempt to trace the killer, believed to be a disgruntled, discharged employe.

Police said that Ray Kochendorfer and William Messmer, the latest of the workmen to fall before the bullets of the madman, had been slain by a .38 caliber revolver. Fred Melsheimer and James Barnett were wounded in previous attacks by the same type of weapon, fired from ambush by the killer. Melsheimer died.

Harris Exonerated In Auto Fatality

Harry Harris, 29, of Harris Terrace, Crafton, son of the late Senator John P. Harris, today was exonerated by a coroner's jury in the death of Nathan Lefkowitz, 29, of 425 Saline avenue, killed in an automobile crash.

Harris' car collided with the Lefkowitz car at Shady and Wilkins avenues on Memorial Day.

Aluminum Company Sues U. S. Over Taxes

The Aluminum Company of America, controlled by the Mellons, today filed suit in Federal Court to recover $212,482 it alleged was overpaid as income tax for 1923, and $50,272 interest.

In that year the company filed a consolidated return for itself and 29 affiliated companies.

EPPLEY LOSES HOTEL CONTROL

Termination of the operating contract of the Eppley Hotels Company with the Hotel William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotel, effective July 30, was announced today with appointment of Gerald P. O'Neill as managing director.

The hotels will be under the direct operation of the receivers of the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, in co-operation with the bondholders' committee.

The Mellon family owns the Pittsburgher Hotel property and is generally conceded to control the bondholders' committee of the William Penn and Fort Pitt.

O'Neill, president of the Pennsylvania State Hotelmen's Association, will assume his new duties August 1. He will resign as director of the Knott Corporation. The resignation will include the capacities as president of the Cherry Way Corporation, operating company of the Hotel Pittsburgher; president of the Oliver-Smithfield Corporation, and president Pittsburgh Grill Corporation.

F. L. Andrews, managing director for the Eppley operations for the past four years, resigned, effective July 15, to become general manager of the Hotel New Yorker, New York City.

Hitler Closely Guarded, Berlin Mourns Victims

Since his return Saturday from his epochal trip to Munich he has left his chancellory, to public knowledge, only twice, and then with strong protection.

Late yesterday he visited the King and Queen of Siam at the Adlon Hotel. He walked through a lobby and hall lined with members of a special bodyguard.

His other visit was to fashionable suburban Dahlem to confer with Kurt Schmitt, minister of economics.

Meanwhile, sympathy for the victims of Hitler's "housecleaning" overrode the stern government admonishment that his actions be accepted without question. The guarded comment was:

"One day saying 'Heil Hitler,' and the next day dead!

"Think of their wives and children."

Outwardly, however, an ominous stillness prevailed in the streets and meeting places—mute evidence of how thoroughly the tongue of political comment has been silenced.

In Berlin's famous "wedding" district, once the stronghold of Communists and the scene of many bloody riots, the hundreds of workingmen's saloons were virtually deserted and a puzzling quiet reigned.

Sally's Dance in Bubble Worries Fair Officials

International News Service.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Sally Rand, exponent of the fan dance, has returned to a Century of Progress.

And though Sally's 1934 presentation is clothed in mystery—and little else—she is already bringing lines of worry to the brows of fair officials.

It is reported that Sally has created a dance—a bubble dance. And that tonight when lights are low a white sylph will appear, apparently enclosed in a great transparent bubble. Soft music; slow weaving steps. And then, gently, the bubble will slowly float upward—leaving Sally. And not much else.

It is the reports of the transparency of the bubble and its being wafted away, that is bothering the censors.

To rumors that the censors would not allow her to present her bubble dance, Sally replied today:

HITLER ORDERS END OF TERRORISM AGAINST REBELS

NAZI DICTATOR FLIES TO SEE HINDENBURG

who was serving a short prison term for outspoken criticism of Chancellor Hitler. It was said he had been shot in his cell.

There was uncertainty as to whether these acts were committed as part of a general plan of action against ostensible revolutionaries or whether they were the acts of irresponsible elements.

At least two members of the Storm Troop press department were reliably reported killed. The press department was back of a campaign against the "Steel Helmet reactionaries" last week in defiance of Chancellor Hitler's orders.

3-WAY CONSPIRACY

As the smoke of the week-end firing cleared up, it became apparent that the "conspiracy" to overthrow the present Nazi regime was grouped in three major circles. These apparently did not act in concert, nor were their programs identical.

Each was a center of unrest and each was ready to profit by the spirit of rebellion fostered in the other two circles.

Broadly speaking, these centers were grouped around three names —Ernst Roehm, head of the Storm Troops; Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, and Herr Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party.

Roehm and his Storm Troops were in rebellion partly because they did not get the places in the Reichswehr to which they aspired, and partly because Hitler's economic program was not radical enough to suit them. They stood for a sort of national Bolshevism.

VON SCHLEICHER GROUP

A second group, in which was Gen. von Schleicher, regarded Germany's foreign political course as disastrous. Von Schleicher and two or three other men feared that the consequences pointed to possible war. He also believed that the government could not rest upon suppression of freedom of speech.

The third group, headed by Klausener, was that of religious persons, chiefly Catholic, who viewed the spread of what was termed "neo-atheism" with grave alarm.

All three groups had their go-betweens from camp to camp. By no means sure of their leaders, these groups actually played with and against each other. Each employed men of the type which loved to mix things up and carry information from one group to another.

Vice Chancellor von Papen insists that he had nothing to do with these "conspiracies" and in fact remained supremely loyal to Hitler himself. Yet the charges against men in his office, all of whom were arrested, was that they were having dealings at least in the direction of the Klausener and von Schleicher groups.

SECRET POLICE HOLD KEY

The Imperial House apparently is in no way involved, although dispatches from Amsterdam, unconfirmed here, reporting the former Crown Prince who had ben expelled from Germany and was in Doorn, cast some doubt on that situation.

The official list, it was stated, will be made public as soon as a few remaining cases still to be judged are disposed of.

MEETING WITH HITLER

Von Papen was received by Chancellor Hitler before the cabinet assembled. The Vice Chancellor remained with him for a brief time, then left in an automobile in which were seated two men in civilian clothes and one Schutz Staffel guard.

So far as could be learned von Papen did not attend the cabinet meeting.

Guards in front of his home, withdrawn for a time early today, were doubled later. Movements of the Vice Chancellor were guarded with the greatest secrecy.

His entourage refused to answer questions, and his home telephone either was disconnected or else orders had been given not to reply.

It was unofficially reported that von Papen and Chancellor Hitler had reached a truce in their differences over the former's outspoken criticism of certain aspects of the Nazi regime.

Further confirmation of the reports was seen in a stern admonishment by President Paul von Hindenburg, that the dapper von Papen, a former chancellor, must not be harmed. Hindenburg placed responsibility for his safety upon the Reichswehr, or standing army, now back in a powerful political position.

A sharp swing by the government away from radical tendencies is expected if Hitler and von Papen have come to terms.

'Story of Traitor' Started by Roehm Ended by Hitler

BERLIN, July 3.—(AP.)—"The Autobiography of a Traitor" was the title Ernst Roehm, late chief of staff of the Nazi Storm Troops, gave his memoirs.

In them he proudly assumes the title "Traitor" as an honorable distinction for one who turned against the "decadent" pre-Hitler Germany to join Nazi ranks.

The last chapter of the book is now being written—not by Roehm—but by his erstwhile Nazi friends, including Adolf Hitler, who called him a traitor to their cause and summarily shot him.

Straus Back in N. Y., Silent on Germany

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—Jesse Isidor Straus, American Ambassador to France, returned today for a two-month vacation. The Ambassador declined to comment on the German situation. He praised the government of France for its handling of the complicated situation in that country.

CITY HALL FIRED IN VIENNA

VIENNA, July 3.—(AP.)—Vienna's City Hall, former Socialist stronghold, was the scene of a possibly incendiary fire today and reports from Salzburg said police headquarters there had been dynamited.

The fire at the City Hall, although quickly extinguished, caused the greatest excitement in government circles. Emil Fey, minister of public security, rushed to the scene with other high officials.

Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, head of the Heimwehr, boarded a plane for Salzburg immediately on receipt of news that an explosion had occurred at the marble hall of the Toscanisen Palace, where both the provincial director of public security and the Salzburg police have their headquarters.

Although the building had been closely guarded an explosive was placed on the second floor, just outside the door of the security director's private apartment. The bomb caused heavy damage but none was reported injured. Police suspected that workmen recently employen in repairs may have built a time bomb into a partition into the wall.

Judge Is Success In Peacemaker Role

Judge M. A. Musmanno successfully played the role of peacemaker today when he helped Mr. and Mrs. John M. McKindley, of 104 Seventh avenue, Carnegie, patch up their differences and decide to start once again on the road of married bliss.

Mrs. Blanch McKindley had her husband brought before Judge Musmanno in an effort to obtain custody of their three children, Jack, 5; Russell, 3, and William, 1.

The will of Miss Annie F. Bowman, of Westminster street, filed today, leaves $15,000 in trust to her brother, Frank E. Bowman. At his death the income goes to her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. L. S. Bowman, and at the death of any survivors the principal goes to Western Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church. W. L. Guckert and D. C. Shaw, Jr., are executors.

Subway Romance Links Girl, 26, Man 70

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—(AP.)—A romance that budded in a subway one rainy night is due to blossom today with marriage of Miss Nellie G. Hunt, 26, who "never thought" of the 44-year difference between her own age and that of the bridegroom-to-be, Franklin W. Frick, 70.

The young woman's affections first turned to Frick when he helped her up the slippery subway stairs in the rain.

Devil's Island Spy In Paris to Marry

PARIS, July 3.—(AP.)—Charles Benjamin Ullmo returned to France today after 26 years on Devil's Island to meet a fiancee he had never before seen.

Ullmo, chief character in a famous spy case, obtained a pardon through the efforts of Mlle. Porier, who met him at Le Havre and accompanied him to Paris. They will be married and Ullmo will "start life anew."

Gold Coast Fights M'Cormick Home As Tea Room

CHICAGO, July 3.—(AP.)—Nobody wants to live in the turreted mansion of the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

Despite its grandeur, built by the millions of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., as a wedding gift for his daughter, it can't be rented or sold now, the Chicago Title and Trust Company, the woman's executors, revealed today.

So the trust company has asked the Zoning Board of Appeals to permit the mansion on Lake Shore Drive to be converted into a glorified tearoom.

NUMBERS, RUM RAIDS NET 4

Four men, arrested in two downtown raids last night, faced arraignment in Central Police Court today.

Peter Katsafanas, 42, and Mike Gurkl, 47, were arrested at 303 Market street, where numbers lottery slips were seized, according to police. They were charged with operating a lottery.

A small quantity of moonshine was seized in the rear of 72 Chatham street, where Ernest Foglia, 39, alleged proprietor, and Tony Tropal, 43, of 1318 Locust street, were arrested, police reported. Tropal, police said, seized a coffee pot containing moonshine and attempted to spill its contents into a sink. He was charged with visiting a disorderly house and interfering with an officer. Foglia was charged with keeping a disorderly house.

U. S. WILL CLOSE RELIEF PURSE TO STATE

Appropriations to End Unless Pennsylvania Chips in Share

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(AP.)—Uncle Sam's relief pocketbook will be closed to Pennsylvania with the end of the summer unless the state chips in with its half of the relief cost.

The state will receive $10,000,000 for August needs in addition to the $11,000,000 July appropriation from the federal government, Administrator Harry L. Hopkins says, but after that not a cent will come from Washington until the commonwealth does something to refill its depleted relief coffers.

Another special session of the General Assembly to provide the state's share is expected to be called by Gov. Pinchot as a result of Hopkins' ultimatum — issued yesterday at his last press conference before his departure on a European tour.

The Governor has repeatedly said transfer of motor license fund money to relief use is impossible without special legislation, squelching virtually the only proposal for quick raising of state funds without necessitating a special session.

Failure of the new state liquor stores system to produce expected revenue accounts for the lack of state funds. The 1933 Legislature, in ear-marking liquor profits for relief, anticipated the stores would create enough revenue to tide Pennsylvania over its relief crisis until the 1935 Legislature meets next January.

RICHBERG NOW ROOSEVELT'S 3-JOB MAN

Counsel for NRA Will Co-Ordinate Agencies Behind Relief

The genial, heavy-set lawyer, who until yesterday was NRA's general counsel, has on hand what he calls the "intensive job of co-ordinating the agencies dealing with industrial relief—the NRA, the PWA, the Emergency Relief Administration and the labor disputes organizations."

Richberg gained wide notice through watching over the legal course of the Blue Eagle from the time it was a fledgling. He has been pointed out frequently as likely to go higher. Few predicted, however, that he would be a three-title man.

Now he's the directtor of the new Industrial Emergency Committee, or co-ordinating agency; the executive director of the National Emergency Council, itself a sort of clearing house for New Deal doings, and executive secretary of the Executive Council. This is made up of cabinet members and emergency chiefs.

Richberg brought to the New Deal a varied background. A poet, a writer of songs, a graduate of the Harvard Law School, he has been called a member of the "Brain Trust."

For years he was active in politics as a Progressive Republican. Much of his later career was spent as a legal spokesman for the railway labor unions.

Before the New Deal Richberg sat down in Hyde Park, N. Y., with President Roosevelt, Hugh S. Johnson, Bernard Baruch and others to help in planning the industrial recovery act.

SCANDAL SINKS JAP CABINET

TOKIO, July 3.—(AP.)—The Japanese cabinet resigned today and high naval and army circles pressed their campaign for a more militaristic government.

Premier Makoto Saito presented the resignations to Emperor Hirohito, who asked Saito to continue as Premier pending selection of a successor.

Prince Saionji, veteran statesman, was called into conference by Hirohito.

The cabinet resigned because it considered itself compromised by a financial scandal in which Hideo Kuroda, Vice Minister of Finance, is involved. The scandal grew out of the operation of the Bank of Formosa, a semi-official institution.

High officials of the army want a cabinet which favors expansion of the service, while the navy desires a government which is certain to take a firm stand at the 1935 naval conference.

$2,250,000 Bonds Issued by County

The County Commissioners today executed an issue of $2,250,000 bonds to be used for road improvements and for voting machines. The issue went to the E. H. Rollins and Sons, of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, at 3 per cent, with a premium of $2,070.

Of the amount $1,500,000 will be used for road improvements and the $750,000 for voting machines.

Stowe Land Owners Hold Up Road Work

Refusal of eight families in Fleming Park, Stowe Township, to give up their homes is holding up construction of a $96,000 stretch of road along Route 51 between Pittsburgh and Coraopolis. The families, numbering 39 persons, are demanding $75,500 for their properties. The county has appraised their homes at $40,000.

NEED OF NAVAL PACT CITED

LONDON, July 3.—(AP.)—Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council, told the House of Commons today that international political conditions are so serious that it is imperative for the 1935 naval conference to "achieve some end."

Baldwin spoke as acting prime minister in the absence of Ramsay MacDonald and as acting head of the British naval delegation.

He evaded all questions from the opposition regarding Great Britain's maximum naval demands as presented recently to the American delegation.

Steel Labor Board Surveys Industry

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(AP.)—Walter P. Stacy, chairman of the National Steel Labor Relations Board, reported last night the group assigned to promote peace in the steel industry would devote several more days to study before taking any action.

After three full days of investigation into the background of the situation, Stacy said the board intended to "orient" itself completely before deciding on its first step.

Code Modification Not In Effect Here

J. D. A. Morrow, chairman of the Western Pennsylvania Sub-Divisional Coal Code Authority, said today that an NRA modification order, permitting bidders on state, federal and municipal contracts to enter proposals as low as 15 per cent below the established code prices for their industries, does not affect the bituminous coal industry. Morrow is president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company.

McDonald, Roosevelt Conference Denied

LONDON, July 3.—(AP.)—A spokesman for Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today ruled out the possibility that the British statesman will see President Roosevelt during his vacation.

There had been speculation that the two would meet in August in Seattle or Vancouver to talk over various international problems. The spokesman said the Prime Minister's coming trip to Canada would be purely a holiday journey.

Chilean Peasants Hungry, in Revolt

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 3.—(AP.)—A thousand armed peasants, driven from their unproductive farms by cold and hunger, rose up in arms today and terrorized a section in southern Chile.

A special train bearing 200 carabineros was rushed to Mulchen, the center of the revolt, to reinforce 150 men already there. Leaders of the movement charge the government has not complied with its colonization promises.

Escaped Monkeys See Pals Feasted

ST. PAUL, July 3.—(AP.)—Torn between freedom to scurry about in the trees, eating a pickup fare of picnic lunch remains, and life in a pen with plenty of bananas to eat, 11 of 16 monkeys that escaped from their Como Park Island Saturday, stayed outside today and watched their stay-at-home companions eat fruit and bread.

PINCHOT ACTS IN MINE WAR

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 3.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today had promised, Attorney Anthony Cavalcante said, to intercede in the warfare between rival unions in the Fayette County coal fields and hear representatives of both factions at a conference in Harrisburg on Thursday.

Attorney Cavalcante had wired the Governor for the conference last night after his client, George Verbanic, of Merrittstown, and 13 co-defendants accused of firing approximately 80 shots into the home of Joseph Wargo, affiliated with the Miners' Independent Brotherhood, waived hearing for court before Alderman Frank R. Foster.

The 14, among them Dan Sabula, president of Isabel Local, United Mine Workers, were arrested by state police Saturday a short time after Wargo's home had been fired upon, forcing Wargo, his wife and six children to the basement for safety. State police said all were heavily armed.

The warfare between the rival factions has been waged for several weeks and has resulted in numerous bombings and indiscriminate shootings.

Counter-informations charging friends of Wargo with firing upon Verbanic's home recently are to be filed today, Attorney Cavalcante said. He said he had requested the District Attorney to make the arrests, but the request was refused.

MRS. ROOSEVELT AT FORD MINE

STONE Ky., July 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt visited the mining camp of the Fordson Coal Company today on her "off the record" automobile tour, and left shortly afterward for Asheville, N. C.

The Fordson Coal Company is owned by Henry Ford.

The First Lady and her two companions left Williamson about 9 o'clock and were accompanied as far as Stone by Mayor O. E. Hogan, of Williamson, and H. G. Clark, editor of the Williamson Daily News.

Miss Mary Dickerman was driving the coupe in which Miss Nancy Cook is the other companion of Mrs. Roosevelt. Yesterday they traveled through West Virginia, politely declining the offer of a state police escort.

Roosevelts' Mother Visiting in Scotland

G. O. P. TO WAGE FIGHT AGAINST 'NEW DEAL'

Bureaus, Burdensome Taxes to Be Issue In Campaign

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The "New Deal," with its far-flung alphabetical reform agencies and vast relief expenditures, became a national issue today. The Republican party accepted President Roosevelt's challenge to test the popularity of his recovery program at the polls in November.

The Republican acceptance was voiced by Henry P. Fletcher, national Republican chairman.

He revealed the Republicans would make separate issues of the NRA, AAA and other alphabetical relief agencies as invading the constitutional rights of the people. He denounced them as "government from above," as "government bureaucracy" and as a "departure from democratic principles."

Fletcher declared the Republican party would seek a verdict of the people on the vast relief expenditures. He revealed Republican orators would ask the people to pass judgment on the cost of this relief while warning of the huge taxes to be imposed in the future when the "bills come due." Fletcher said:

"For over a year the administration has had a free hand. The Congress, which has just adjourned, gave to the President almost unlimited powers over the lives and fortunes of our people and the President, in turn, delegated these powers to a vast and bewildering maze of administrative agencies. It is this departure from democratic principles and all that is distinctly American that is called the 'New Deal.'" turned to the Kane home to take views of the interior of the room. Detectives said they wanted to learn what position Mrs. Kane was in when she was shot.

Fletcher repeated Lincoln's famous Gettysburg declaration: "We are engaged in a contest to see whether democratic government can survive here."

An autopsy showed the gun had been held against her head.

HEAR NO SHOTS

Three children asleep in the one-story bungalow on the crest of a hill overlooking Etna told Deputy Davidson they had heard nothing. They are Charles, 20; Elvira, 19, and Marion, 18.

When Davidson and Duderstadt arrived at the Kane home they were informed the revolver with which Mrs. Kane had been shot could not be found. After a half-hour search Davidson said he found the weapon, containing one empty and one loaded shell, in the sheet wrapped around Mrs. Kane's body.

When Kane was told the gun had been found, he exclaimed:

"Thank God for that."

SHELLS EXAMINED

Detective Duderstadt turned over to Davidson a piece of lead found under a dresser, along with two shells, one taken from the gun, the other from the dresser.

Chief Kane told Detective Duderstadt that every night on retiring he placed his revolevr on the dresser with his blackjack. He said that on awaking he had missed his revolver and three shells, but was mystified by the fact that the gun could not be found.

Friends of the family said the Kanes' family life was happy. Mrs. Kane, they said, had been ill for some months and under care of a physician.

Kane has headed the Etna police for a year. He has been on the force 11 years.

'Hanfy' Praises Hitler As Aide to Religion

BOSTON, Mass., July 3.—(AP.)—The Boston Evening American in a copyrighted story today quotes Dr. Ernest (Hanfy) Hanfstaengl, Hitler aide, as expressing the opinion that Christians of the world—Catholic and Protestant alike—should be grateful for Adolf Hitler's rise to power.

Hanfstaengl, the American says, said:

"If Hitler had not won out a year ago last February, Germany would have gone red-Bolshevist, and Christianity would have disappeared overnight. It would have been the end of all religion. The clerics should be grateful to the man."

This statement was an answer to a question about the reported execution of Herr Klausener, president of the Berlin Catholic Society.

Dr. Hanfstaengl yesterday presented a bust of Willibard Ritler von Gluck to Harvard Music Department on the two hundred and twentieth anniversary of the birth of the famed German composer.

The bust was one of the three carefully guarded by the Hitlerite on his dash here from Berlin to attend the twenty-fifth reunion of his Harvard class. The other two busts, one of the philosopher Schopenhauer, and the other of President Paul von Hindenburg remain in Hanfstaengl possession.

Today

of Rome within the Vatican walls, Better informed, perhaps, than any man in Europe, he chooses to remain in touch. England and France worry like a quiet couple with "a burglar downstairs."

THAT THE HITLER collapse would be followed by horrible violence is only too probable. What would come afterward?

Would extreme "red radicalism" come to the front to take control? Would there be that union of Russia and Germany that many Germans advocated immediately after the signing of the Versailles treaty?

IT IS INTERESTING to read today Russia is lending money to Germany indirectly by buying German exchange for gold, strengthening the mark.

In what position would England, France, Italy and the rest of western Europe be, if Germany and Russia should unite, Germany supplying the scientific knowledge, the chemical skill, the perfected industrial equipment, and Russia the power of will that has successfully defied the civilized world while putting through with marvelous success a plan that, in the beginning, was universally derided?

THERE IS REALLY no important news now except German news, followed closely by every intelligent human being.

At the moment Hitler has the government and the guns in his hands. And troops who have learned from Hitler's 2 o'clock in the morning visit to Munich how quickly and how powerfully he can strike, wonder if they get rid of that "cure" where they would find another leader.

HITLER HAS by no means "gone into hiding." He appears in public, riding through the streets in an open automobile, but "heavily guarded."

In Italy where another strong man rules by the right of the mightiest, Hitler's swift and ruthless action is applauded. Those that said Mussolini was the real strong man and Hitler only the imitation may have to change their opinion.

Hitler's spokesman warns the dissatisfied "He who conspires against Hitler is playing with his own head." That sort of talk sustains power as long as violence can uphold it. But usually that is not for long.

Land Lubbers on Cruise Twitted by Roosevelt

ABOARD U. S. S. GILMER, ACCOMPANYING PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, July 3.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt and his shipmates were afforded a real test of their sea legs today as they headed due south toward Haiti and Porto Rico.

The cruiser Houston, bearing the presidential party, proceeded through rough seas last night and early today at a fast clip of 18 to 20 knots. The Houston dipped and pitched, and the trailing destroyers bobbed about like corks.

Seasickness casualties were heavy aboard the destroyer Gilmer, among newspapermen, and the destroyer Williamson, carrying secret service men, but they hung on grimly, declining an offer by the President to slacken the pace.

Mr. Roosevelt enjoyed his second day on the Atlantic today, relaxing and taking things easy with his sons, Franklin, Jr., and John. But he remained in touch with the White House by wireless. He joshed the inland newspapermen about some of the nonnautical terms in their stories.

The Houston was off the Florida coast today and proceeding far out at sea. The schedule called for the first stop Thursday at Haiti and the first landing Friday at Porto Rico.

SIX KNOWN DEAD AFTER DRINKING BOUT IN HOBO CAMP

CANNED HEAT, BAY RUM AND 'ALKY' FATAL

'Host' to Party Only to Survive; Shackled to Hospital Cot

BULLETIN.

Two other persons who attended the fatal drinking party at Stoops Ferry were reported missing today and feared dead. James Gavin, 27, of Mitchell street, Pittsburgh, who attended the party, described the missing pair as Jack Hole, of McKeesport, and Harry Heeter, of Woods Run.

Six men were known to be dead today as the sequel to a drinking orgy at a hoboes' camp at Stoops Ferry.

A mixture of bay rum, wood alcohol and "canned heat" was blamed for the deaths.

Police were searching the surrounding countryside for other bodies.

One man was reported to have died from alcohol at the camp last week and to have been buried by his companions along the river bank.

COMPANION HELD

Meanwhile, county detectives, Sewickley and Glenfield police were conducting a searching investigation into the fatal drinking bout. Glenfield officers had under arrest a companion of the dead man. He left the party yesterday. This probably saved him from the same fate as the others.

One of the survivors of the deadly drink, who is fighting for his life in the Valley Hospital at Sewickley, also will be questioned to throw light on the tragedy.

He is William Titmus, 50, of Fleet street, Rankin, said to have been the "host" at the camp.

Titmus is shackled to his hospital bed.

Four of the dead were partially identified as James Carney, 53, of Braddock; Michael Carney, 44, of Braddock, no relative of James Carney; George Heckel, 71, of Troy Hill, and a man named Ferguson, aged about 50.

There were no clues to the identity of the other two dead men.

HOBO HANGOUT

Although the camp has been known as a hangout for hoboes, Titmus was said to have invited his friends for a drinking party there. Under the protection of a covering thrown over some trees they sat down to the deadly bout.

First word of the tragedy was given by an unidentified hobo to John Sentz, a watchman at the Stoops Ferry county asphalt plant. He summoned police. The victims were rushed to the hospital, where only Titmus remained fighting for his life. He is given a fair chance to recover.

Coounty Detective Sam Riddle today found a quart of the deadly liquor cached in a spring at the camp. He will have it analyzed.

SLAYER OF GIRL HANGS HIMSELF

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 3.—(AP.)—Using his shirt as a noose, Michael Chaildin, 44, who shot and killed his daughter with a shotgun Sunday, hanged himself early today in a cell in the county jail.

The body was found by the jailer, suspended from a clothes hook. Officers said it apparently was his second attempt to hang himself, as his broken belt was found on the floor.

While several small children were attending the funeral of their sister, Annie, the girl who was shot, officials were taking the body of the father to an undertaking parlor in Marianna.

Chaildin was to have been charged with murder today. Authorities said he shot his daughter during a drunken rage Sunday as she sat on the steps of their home in West Zollersville, preparing to go to church. Mrs. Chaildin is ill and confined to bed, and Annie, 20, the eldest child, ministered as a mother to her brothers and sisters.

ROCKEFELLER SCION TO WED

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—A grandson of John D. Rockefeller is to wed a daughter of an old New England family.

Laurance S. Rockefeller, youngest son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will be the bridegroom and the bride will be Miss Mary French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John French, of Greenwich, Conn. Her father is a retired New York lawyer; her mother, a daughter of Frederick Billings, pioneer in the building of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

A brief announcement of the betrothal was made by Mr. and Mrs. French last night.

The wedding is to take place in August and will be the second of the summer to involve the heirs to great fortunes. Ellen Tuck French, who married John Jacob Astor last week, and young Rockefeller's fiancee are not related.

Although his father is one of the world's wealthiest men, Laurance Rockefeller is unknown in the night clubs. He is a serious student in the Harvard Law School. When he went traveling with his parents and elder brothers, he earned his pin money by buying the tickets and checking the baggage.

Everybody Gets Stepped Upon In Europe's New Dance

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Things are popping in Europe, and it ain't corn.

What are you going to do in a land where the national dance is stepping on everybody's feet?

Everything is blamed on that Versailles Treaty, which brought peace without good will, and men to earth.

Well, we will have to sign another treaty! Get your boys together. America gets into everything up to its neck—and that's short.

Once again all the nations are in the cat olympics. Which way will it jump? And whom will it land on?

M'CREADY WILL RULING FOUGHT

Three judges today were hearing arguments on Dr. R. J. McCready's exceptions to Visiting Judge J. W. Dawson's ruling that the doctor abide by the will of his wife, Mrs. Matilda Craig McCready, leaving him $1,000 a month.

Mrs. McCready left an estate valued at $1,417,988, and her husband, a Sewickley physician, contends he should receive more than $1,000 a month, despite a prenuptial agreement.

In addition to Judge Dawson, of Uniontown, Judges Ambrose B. Reid, president Judge of Common Pleas Court, and Judge Edward C. Chalfant heard the arguments.

Here's Cool Spot! Point Park Is Refrigerator

While Pittsburgh is experiencing high temperatures, little Point Park at the junction of the Point and Manchester bridges remains the coolest spot in town. Ice cakes buried under earth send out refreshing breezes and the temperature at times drop below freezing.

The ice cakes lodged in the river bank last winter. The cakes were covered with dirt when the Weather Bureau constructed a 40-foot well, housing water lines from the river bed by which the river stages can be detremined. The dirt covering kept the ice from melting.

Fights Alienation Suit

MRS. BERTHA SKINNER ENGEL . . . . . SUED FOR $50,000

Mrs. Engel, 633 Herron avenue, awarded a divorce from Francis Engel on her claim that she was his wife No. 1, now fighting a $50,000 alienation suit brought against her by the woman who says that she is wife No. 1. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

DIVORCED WIFE FIGHTS BALM

Mrs. Bertha Skinner Engel, of 633 Herron avenue, awarded a divorce yesterday on her claim that she was wife No. 2 in the life of Francis Engel, will fight a $50,000 alienation suit brought against her by the woman who says she is wife No. 1.

For that purpose Mrs. Engel will leave shortly for Los Angeles where the suit has been filed, according to her attorney, W. D. Hilldorfer.

Mrs. Engel testified in her divorce suit that when she married Engel she did not know he had another wife. The "other wife" likewise appeared to have been in the dark, for she filed suit against Bertha Skinner, Mrs. Engel's maiden name.

The Los Angeles woman's husband goes under the name of Eric Von Engel. But during the Engel divorce trial here, M. A. Nernberg, handwriting expert, testified that handwriting on the marriage licenses taken out in the names of Engel and Von Engel were the same.

Fireworks Blaze Perils Whole City

CASCADE LOCKS, Ore., July 3.—(AP.)—Firemen and equipment rushed here from The Dalles and Hood River late last night brought under control a fire which originated in a fireworks stand, roared through the business district and threatened the entire city.

HIGHWAY BRIDGE BOTCH CHARGED

In a report to the County Commissioners, Riordan charged that the $247,000 Shades Run concrete bridge near Nadine, is unnecessary, in a dangerous condition and should be abandoned in favor of a surface roadway.

The bridge was opened July 15, 1931. It spans Pennsylvania Railroad tracks that were abandoned 15 days after the bridge was opened, Riordan says.

The north wall of the bridge has bulged due to the foundation being undermined by springs, and the parapet may fall at any time, the investigator asserts.

Opening of the boulevard was delayed for months by the so-called "Nadine bungle," which was finally solved by straightening the boulevard after a compromise with the Pennsylvania Water Company.

Cleveland Council Scouts for Nudists

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—(AP.)—Cleveland Councilmen are going to sail along Lake Erie shores on a nudist-hunting expedition.

PRINCE HENRY, DUTCH QUEEN'S CONSORT, DIES

Tragedy Follows Hint Daughter May Wed Wales' Brother

THE HAGUE, July 3.—(AP.)—Henry, prince consort of Holland, died today suddenly. He was 38.

The marriage of Prince Henry to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, in 1901, was one of the most brilliant royal alliances of a generation. She was 20 and her bridegroom 24.

Suffering from heart disease, Prince Henry had been ill for several days since he was stricken at his headquarters in the Red Cross office. At the time the Queen hurried home from a holiday in Switzerland.

She was at another palace today when word came that her husband's condition had suddenly taken a turn for the worse, and arrived too late to see the Prince Consort alive.

LONDON, July 3.—(AP.)—A gay 10-days' holiday came to a tragic end today for Crown Princess Juliana, of the Netherlands, when word of her father's death came while she was visiting her cousin, Princess Alice.

Persons close to the royal entourage said the princess broke down at the news and could not be consoled. Accompanied by two ladies in waiting she took the next boat train. The crown princess had intended to leave tomorrow to visit her father, although advised he was not seriously ill.

Princess Juliana attended the Wimbledon tennis matches Friday with the bachelor Prince George, giving rise to rumors he might be the next prince consort of the Netherlands.

ASTORS ON WAY TO LAKE LOUISE

ST. PAUL, July 3.—(AP.)—A tall, lean young man stepped off a train here last night to stretch his legs a bit, grin engagingly and admit that he "wasn't sorry" to get away from the "fuss and feathers" that attended his wedding in Newport.

The man was John Jacob Astor III, who was married Saturday to the former Ellen Tuck French.

Mrs. Astor did not leave their private car. After one peek at the town through the window of their compartment, she retired for the night.

Astor was more curious. Their car stopped over for 70 minutes in St. Paul while it was hooked on to another train and he spent most of the time pacing up and down the station platform, enjoying the night air.

Just where they are going on their honeymoon, Astor didn't seem to know. He said:

"We intend to stop over a bit at Lake Louise. Then we'll move on out to Vancouver, taking in the sights along the way."

In about three weeks Mr. and Mrs. Astor will be going back to Newport and in the fall they plan to sail for Europe.

Trial Honeymoon Urged As Character Test

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—A group of the country's leading educators sat about a table at Columbia University discussing what should be taught young men and women about getting married.

Dr. Elsa B. Grove, lecturer at Teachers' College, Columbia, said:

"Young women should go on week-end parties with prospective husbands.

"That's the best way of finding out about the men they are to marry. You can tell a man's character largely by the fact that he keeps his bathtub clean. You can tell by the neatness of his bathrobe."

A college girl should marry a college man, said Prof. Ernest R. Groves, of the University of North Carolina.

"She needs intellectual companionship. A girl is not satisfied merely to become anybody's cook. For this reason, she should marry a college boy."

Lesson No. 17 in Building Course.

By J. JAMES MOORE, Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

Hello, model airplane builders!

How are your ships coming along? There are just a few days remaining until the official Pittsburgh model plane derby will be held at South Park's athletic field. The time is Saturday at 12:30 p. m.

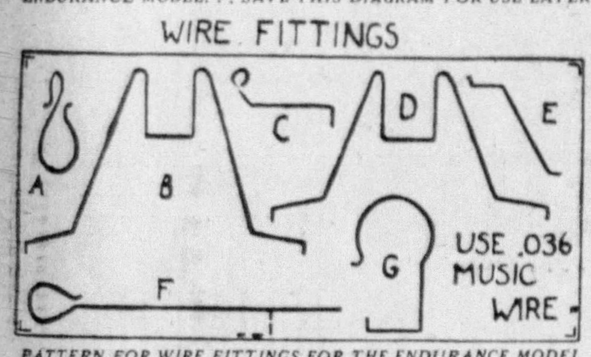
ENDURANCE MODEL. . . SAVE THIS DIAGRAM FOR USE LATER



PATTERN FOR WIRE FITTINGS FOR THE ENDURANCE MODEL

A pattern that gives the exact sizes for the wire fittings for the endurance model: A is for the "S" hook for rear motor mounting; B the front wing clip; C the rear motor hook; D the rear wing clip; E the tail skid; F the propeller shaft; G the motor can.

Though a very small percentage of our membership will be entered in the meet, I am expecting hundreds of birdmen members and thousands of persons from Western Pennsylvania to witness the great outdoor flying contest.

Come out and watch the champions fly their planes, and I am sure that when next year's meet is held that you will be one of the champs yourself. If you are having any difficulties in learning how to build your models, here is your chance to iron out your problems.

You have until Thursday midnight to mail me your entry blanks. And if you have any friends who want to enter the meet, who are not yet members of our organization, tell them that they still have time to become a contestant.

Thursday I will give you a list of the entrants.

I urge you boys and girls in class "B" not to be backward about entering the contest. So far we have received very few entry blanks from members in this class. Nine medals—don't forget—will be awarded the younger group members. You will compete in a group of your own and not with the more experienced builders.

Lesson No. 17 in Building Course

Certainly, by this time, you have your motor stick, propeller and wheels completed, as directed in Sunday's lesson.

You should have become somewhat adept at this work now that you have constructed two models and are engaged in your third—a real championship endurance single stick model or entry in Saturday's gala Model Plane Derby.

With today's column I am publishing a pattern for your wire fittings. This gives you the exact size of your wire parts so that all you have to do is lay your .036 wire over the patterns and with your flat nose pliers make the angular bends and with your round nosed pliers make your curves and circles.

When you have completed all of your wire fittings, put them away with the rest of the members of this model you have completed until such time as we are ready to assemble them.

Do not pay any attention, at this time, to the dotted lines under wire fitting "F" in the pattern. This is for future use in showing just where the fitting is bent after inserted into the hub of the propeller, as will be detailed in a later lesson.

Model Well On Way Now

If we are to enter this model in Saturday's contest, we had better put some extra work and labor into it, especially if we want to test-fly it first, as we should always do. But our model is well on its way.

There is really nothing more to do after your wire fittings are completed except make the built-up wings, rudder and stabilizer. This requires a lesson all of its own so we will leave that until Thursday.

However, we can make our landing gear. For this we use the .042 music wire. There are many different types of landing gears and you can use any standard type or use one of your own design.

The one shown in the diagram, published with Sunday's column, has two struts. The struts are two and a half inches apart at the motor stick and meet at the axle.

The landing gear is seven inches long. The wheels are also seven inches apart. This heavy landing gear is necessary because the model is large and because we must bring the weight of the model up to three ounces if it is to be eligible for entry in Saturday's derby.

However, a landing gear is not at all necessary for this model, and the rules for Saturday's derby give us the privilege of using a landing gear or leaving it off. So suit yourself as to whether you want it or not.

In Thursday's lesson we will make the built up wings, rudder and stabilizer, assemble the model and get it ready for our test flight.

Be sure you keep the diagram on the top view published in today's lesson and the one of the side view published on Sunday. You will need to refer to them in making your built up wing and tail unit.

Our space is up and I'm going to make a forced landing right at this point. I'll see you at South Park Saturday!

Dorothy Accepts, Maxie Prepares to Return Home

By MAX BAER,
World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

CHAPTER XV

After leaving Jack Dempsey I whizzed along to Dorothy's. I was still all dolled up, and so we went to a tea room—or was it a speakeasy? Anyway, I said to Dorothy:

"When de we get married?"

She asked: "Do you really love me?"

"And," asked Dorothy, when I had slowed down a little, "you don't love anybody else?"

"No one, darling; no one in the world. You mean everything — everything. I haven't even looked at another girl since I met you."

"Well, then," said Dorothy, and there was an odd expression in her smile, "could you please tell me how it happens that you've been stepping out with a few debbies?"

Progresses With Dorothy

"Oh, them!" I popped. And stopped. I wasn't expecting such a question. Had those debbies blown a whistle on me—or what? But I'm a fast thinker, so I said: "Why, darling, I've been around with them all because of my love for you."

Dorothy'e eyebrows tilted.

"Oh, you," broke in Dorothy, "did it all for my sake. How sweet of you! Are you going to continue favoring me by stepping out with some more society girls?"

"No, darling, of course not, now that I know you don't approve. I'll let you be my only teacher hereafter. How about marrying me?"

First Encouraging Word

"Just keep right on asking me," she smiled back. "Some day you're liable to catch me in a weak moment."

That night I followed a usual custom. I rode up and down Broadway in my 16-cylinder car, with the inside lights on, so that everybody could get a good look at me in my evening clothes, topped off with a high silk hat. But a newsboy crabbed my act.

"Hey, douse the glims, fathead. We know you."

Well, that was comforting. I was known, at last, on Broadway. No use strutting any more. I kept the lights out after that.

All this time Ancil Hoffman wasn't any too happy about my romance with Dorothy.

"Why don't you marry the girl and settle down?" he asked.

"Because she won't marry me."

"Why not?"

"I guess it's because I haven't got enough class."

"Well," said Ancil, "if she doesn't want you, why annoy her by hanging around?"

"I'm not annoying her; I'm entertaining her," I shot back.

After the Loughran fight Ancil tried to get me another shot or two, but the offers didn't attract him, so he decided we'd go back to California by sailing through the Panama Canal.

I raced up to Dorothy's house and outlined a little plan. She was opposed to it at first, but finally said "Yes." By this time I had given Ancil to understand that Dorothy and I were "quits."

Financial Difficulties

"Well, you can imagine how agitated Ancil got when he found that Dorothy was on the same boat, even though she was going only as far as Havana.

But before Ancil went sky-rocketing on that, I had treated him on the morning we sailed to something else that caused him to hit nine rooftops.

Ancil had been liberal with me on money advances during the first six weeks in New York, then had tightened up—and how! He reduced me to an allowance of $5 a day.

MAX BAER . . . PROVING THAT HE'S KING OF FISTIANA

My gross earnings for my three fights in New York were: Schaaf, $4,879.72; Heeney, $5,062.33, and Loughran, $8,130.18. The grand total was $18,072.23, and my personal 30 per cent figured a little less than $5,500. What with paying off a few bills, I shot the works long, long before the Loughran contest, and was well overboard with Ancil.

So, that's why he clamped down.

About a week after he had put me on the $5-a-day allowance—and during that time I hadn't asked him to raise the ante—he complimented me.

"You see how it works," he said. "You've been getting along on $5 a day, and that just proves you can do it. Now that I've cured you of your wild spending, you can begin paying off your debts and save some money."

I said nothing. There was nothing for me to say—then. But on the morning we were to sail, I went to Ancil's room and said:

"I've got to have $1,200."

"You what?" asked Ancil, blinking.

"Yes, $1,200—by 10 o'clock. I couldn't live on the nickel and dime money you were passing out, so I borrowed $800, and I've got to pay that back before we sail."

Ancil gulped a couple of gulps.

"Go on, go on," he advised. "I'm strong. I can take it. Tell me about that other $400."

Bluff Called by Hoffman

"That's charged to my account at the hotel here. I bought flowers and charged them, bought theater tickets and charged them, and when I was shy of cash I borrowed money on hotel tabs, and so on. I've got to have that $1,200."

"No," said Ancil. "You're overdrawn about $2,500 now.

I went to the window, opened it—the street was 34 floors below—and said:

"Twelve hundred bucks, or I go sailing out of here. And then how are you going to get back that $2,500 overdraft, and where will you get another champion like me?"

Ancil eyed me calmly. "Jump, dearie," he said. "Jump! Then my world's champion headache will be gone."

"If that's the way you feel about it, I won't oblige you," I answered, and shut the window.

I finally wangled the money out of Ancil, but since then my credit—except for room and food—was about 120 below zero at all hotels, when Ancil was traveling with me.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Tomorrow is a big day in American history—a day which brings back happy memories of a time when this nation freed itself from foreign domination.

Let's always keep it as a day of pleasant memories.

Let no rash, reckless act of yours tomorrow make it a date that will bring unpleasant memories and unhappiness.

Heed the warning of the fire chief, John Heinz, who asks that all be careful in their celebration of the Glorious Fourth. Remember, he says, that all fireworks are dangerous, even the so-called "safe" sparklers will ignite a young girl's flimsy dress.

Remember the accidents of past years. Remember to be careful yourself and remember to watch the children.

I hope tomorrow that everyone will have a happy day and that July 5 will not be a day of regrets or anxiety for any Globe Trotter.

* * *

In the last several weeks I have received no less than 15 complaints from Globe Trotters who are annoyed by the operation of social clubs next door to or in the immediate vicinity of their homes.

Some complaints allege that liquor is being sold unlawfully and that I should report the alleged offenders.

In many of these cases there are two sides to the story and although the club may be operating noisily, it may still be operating within the law.

The best place to complain is to the local police authorities, who will investigate.

* * *

J. F. Keegan, Wildwood—Sorry to inform you that Carnegie Museum is closed on the Fourth of July. Pittsburgh offers other attractions. I am sure you will make no mistake by coming to town on the Fourth.

See other sections of today's paper for tomorrow's events.

Tom Wilmot Writes Joe Penner's Gags

Russ Truitt, mandolin wizard, returns to the air waves tonight after a six months' absence with a quarter-hour program at 6:15.

Do You Know As Much As Your Cat?

She's a knowing cat.

She asks for little—just her meals, a saucer of milk and a place in the sun. She gets plenty of sleep and exercise. She never worries, never frets. What is the result? Such vitality and resistance that we say, "Cats have nine lives."

What does your cat do when she is not well? She eats catnip, if she can find it. She eats grass and certain green plants to which her instinct leads her.

Your cat takes herbs for a tonic.

Did you ever stop to think that Old Mother Nature, who supplies the herbs necessary to your cat's health, has also provided the herbs necessary to your own well-being?

You don't have to hunt for them as the cat does. The herbs you need are skillfully blended and compounded in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, an old fashioned tonic that will help to restore your strength and energy.

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY

Pat Kennedy On Bernie Program

By AIRCASTER

It's radio news when Pat Kennedy returns to the air with his old maestro, Ben Bernie, which he does tonight at 9 o'clock over WCAE.

It's radio romance when pretty Connie Callahan, of Wilkinsburg, telephones to make sure that you know that Pat's scheduled.

Columbia and WJAS are planning to set out this afternoon to find the answer to a question for the President of the United States, who, as is generally known, is interested in how the man in the street regards the NRA.

At the moment, when the answer is found, it will have no particular significance, naturally, but, as CBS figures, it will make a pretty interesting broadcast.

Thus it has set 3:30 this afternoon as the time for another of those "man in the street" broadcasts, when announcers stationed at various points in at least six representative cities will accost citizens, willy nilly, and ask them to vote "yes" or "no" on their opinions of the NRA.

* * *

Gladys Swarthoute will not take part in "Robin Hood" tonight on WCAE, and it will be the first time in the operetta series that the broadcast has been staged without her.

Muriel Wilson, who seems to be doing all right, will take the lead, for a reason that the sponsor has not announced, although it is supposed that a voice of a different type than Swarthout's is demanded by the role.

MR. QUEEN?

The newest of the novelist to be invited to do scripts for radio drama is the literary gentleman known as Ellery Queen, who not only authors mystery books with that tag, but bestows the same monicker on the hero.

Mr. Queen, who is a prolific fellow, apparently is a good showman. A lot of people would like to know his real identity. But Mr. Queen, who is really a former insurance man, thinks it good fun to surround himself with an aura of mystery, almost as intriguing as that which stalks through his murder tales.

And it might be stated parenthetically that Mr. Queen is no piker when it comes to literary murder.

Tomorrow, the Fourth of July, will find most of the smart set at the various country clubs.

There'll be a circus for children of members of the Allegheny Country Club tomorrow afternoon at the clubhouse. And tomorrow night there'll be a dinner-dance for members and their friends.

At Longue Vue Country Club there'll be a swimming party for members and friends in the afternoon; a dinner-dance and a supper-dance, whichever you wish to make it, in the evening.

Pittsburgh Field Club will have a dinner-dance tomorrow night. Fox Chapel Golf Club will probably be the only one of the clubs not having some special festivity on the Fourth—but it will have a special party on July 14.

Pittsburgh Country Club will have a buffet supper and dancing tomorrow night.

100 Children Open Home At Oakmont

More than 100 youngsters, all there on special recommendation of some hospital or physician, are romping today over the two and one-half acre estate at Oakmont on which is located the Fresh-Air Home of the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor.

They arrived in big motor buses and their arrival signified the official opening of the home for the summer.

There were present Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock, chairman of the association's Fresh-Air Home committee; Mrs. James H. Reed, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the association, and Harry W. Shepard, secretary of the association, as well as several members of the auxiliary and the committee and the various women who will have active charge of the home during the summer.

Although the farm, situated on the highest point back of Oakmont, at Tenth and Delaware avenues, has been in operation for more than 20 years, it presents this summer the most attractive appearance since it was founded. The buildings have been painted and all the playground paraphernalia has been thoroughly overhauled.

The pool has been pronounced one of the finest open air swimming pools for children in America. There are baseball grounds and every conceivable apparatus for the entertainment and physical development of the boys and girls. There is a large open-air pavilion where Sunday services and week-night entertainments will be held. The master house, in which the children's sleeping quarters are located, has on its ground floor a large dining room, a kitchen and, almost entirely around it extends a screen-enclosed veranda.

Mrs. Sara Vaughn Leddon has been appointed director of activities; Mrs. P. K. van Valkenburg, dietician and matron; Miss Thelma Knapp, Miss Carol Schmidt and Jackson Frymire, counsellors, and Miss Mina McCormick, head nurse.

The Rev. Alexander B. Allison, of Shelby, O., the bride's uncle, solemnized the marriage, assisted by the Rev. U. Franklin Smiley, of the Dormont Presbyterian Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace and mousseline de soie and a short tulle veil finished with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Judith McMullin was the maid of honor and Miss Isabel Shelton, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. They wore gowns of white mousseline de soie embroidered in yellow with yellow sashes and matching hats. Their bouquets were yellow roses and blue delphinium. Dr. George Schein, of Homestead, was the best man.

The wedding dinner was held at the Pleasant Hill Farm after which Dr. Shelton and his bride left on a motor trip. They will be at home in Dormont upon their return. Mrs. Shelton is a graduate of Wilson College. Dr. Shelton was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh medical school and is a member of Phi Beta Pi and Alpha Omega Alpha medical fraternities. Upon his return he will take up the duties of a resident in pathology at Mercy Hospital.

Mrs. Stewart J. Cort, of Sparrows Point, Md., was here for the wedding, as was Miss Evelyn Beal, of Wheeling, W. Va.

Miss Daugherty Bride of Saturday

A Pennsylvania College for Women graduate and a University of Pittsburgh man were married Saturday morning at 11:30 o'clock in the East End Baptist Church. The bride was Miss Elizabeth Fordyce Daugherty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Daugherty, of Callery street. The bridegroom was Fred L. Dennis, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Dennis, of Jackson street.

Officiating was the Rev. Raymond G. Pierson, pastor of the church. The altar was banked with cibotium ferns and crotons. The bride wore a gown of embroidered white organza over powder blue taffeta and a large, white organdie hat. She carried white iris, bovardia and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William Tears, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, wearing peach mousseline de soie with a large matching organdie hat. She carried Talisman roses and blue delphinium. William Tears served as best man for his brother-in-law. Ushers included Dr. Stuart J. Horner, Dr. Edward Glotfelty and George S. Daugherty, Jr.

There was a wedding breakfast in the Twentieth Century Club after the ceremony, and later Mr. and Mrs. Dennis, Jr., left for Las Vegas, N. M.

Teas for Members Planned by Council

A series of teas for prospective members has just been concluded by the membership extension committee of Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women. At each one, the president, Mrs. Charles B. Buerger, explained the advantages of belonging to Council. Mrs. Karl Kaufmann, of Wightman street, and Mrs. Oscar Oppenheimer, of Bartlett street, were among the hostesses for the teas, at each of which there was a musical program.

HINTS TO IGNITE JULY 4TH APPETITES

Tomorrow, like every holiday, is a big day at home, one on which meals are expected to be extra good, as well as unusually large.

Don't fool yourself that just because it's the Fourth the youngsters are going to forget their appetites. If anything, they'll be hungier than usual.

Not that the meals need bother you. Prudence Penny has seen to it that you've gotten plenty of good recipes in the last few days on which to base your menus.

And the women whose recipes aid you have been awarded either a $5 or a $1 cash award or a cook book. You can get a similar prize by sending in your recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. No recipes are returned.

Boil 20 minutes and add one cup heated sugar to one cup juice; boil until it begins to jell, about five minutes, skim, and turn into glasses. Cover, and keep in a cool, dry place. Through the Spyglass

VIEWING THE NEW

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

* * *

Gentlemen! . . . allow us to offer you our sincere apologies on a nice shiny silver platter! We've neglected you! But two days ago, someone accused us of throwing you down . . . sort of a Forgotten Man act as it were.

And so we just up and out and to the men's department of one of the stores where we told our tale into the ear of Mr. Know-It-All there, and found out all the newest new-nesses for mankind. The first thing that took our eye being . . .

His tie-pin! Probably his own private discovery, but one we're making public here and now. A large safetypin effect of chrome or gold metal with squared edges instead of rounded ones. ($1.00.) The "point" is not a point . . . it's blunt . . . and fastens your tie by sliding through under the shirt-front edge and coming out a buttonhole . . . fastening on the outside across the tie. New, swank, reminiscent of Schaparelli (of course you wouldn't know about her . . . but she's the gal that launches smart styles like this!).

* * *

You don't have to own a yacht, either, to wear one of the cool "mid-ocean" shirts that are on deck! They live up to their name . . . basket weaves, in a mesh that does well by every breeze wafting by. In bamboo (a tan shade), canary, white, and blue . . . with zipper closing . . . neat and shipshape! $1.69.

* * *

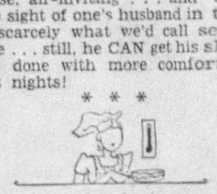
What every man should know! That he can get washable handblocked Indian madras ties nowadays for $1.00. No two of them exactly alike! Some of them nicely violent (are you violent, Mister?). Some of them like the good old family tablecloth—printed in gingham-checks! (This is very whoopie-doople these days!) Some of them in soft faded runny shades that set off you brown-skinned boys with your flashing teeth! (Suntanners note!) And when you've gotten all hot under the collar and melted off onto one of them, it's not ruined! It washes, gent'men!

* * *

And so to bed! In a pair of the new hot-weather pajamas that must be a godsend to all he-s.

Of fine white mull . . . unbelievably ilghtweight . . . with short sleeves and "shorts" instead of trousers. These are wide-legged, loose, air-inviting . . . and while the sight of one's husband in them is scarcely what we'd call seductive . . . still, he CAN get his sleeping done with more comfort on hot nights!

* * *



What to do about your "inwards" in hot weather! Hot weather meals are a problem . . . but they're going to be solved this Thursday in the first of the Summer cooking classes scheduled here in town! Each week during July there will be an important Summer cookery item . . . demonstrated under your very eyes . . . under your inquisitive nose.

AND . . . the best part of it is, that whilst you're goggle-eyed with admiration at the masterly way these demonstrations are carried out . . . you NEEDN'T be stewed in your own juice. Because . . .

This particular spot has just finished putting in a refrigerating plant that would wear out several hundred ice-men were they kept busy "icing" you. Everything is carried out to make you feel as if you were in your own home . . . only better! Including a really truly rock garden in a corner . . . with flowers actually GROWING! We practically HAUNT the place . . . for cooling off purposes, if nothing else! (No charge for the instructions every Tuesday in July).

Girl Who 'Wed Too Young' Craves Freedom

An aching hearted wife pens a sad lament. Everything is upside down for her. She craves the outside world, and the experiences of freedom denied her, in that she married so young. And the WRONG MAN.

Furthermore she chides me exceedingly, and says that I say there is no CAUSE for divorce. That I said this very thing in a recent column given over to divorce and the evils of it.

I beg leave to contradict, sister. I said I didn't believe in divorces. That was all.

There are plenty of causes for divorce, if we wish to air them. There are the playful little ways that bore us stiff. There are the grumpy morning fits when no sunshine creeps in, and nothing goes right. And no one helps. There is the man so tight with his money that it would take a pair of pincers to wedge it from his pocket. There are the disagreeable antics worse than all the darkness of an Arctic winter.

Miss Brunot

Non-support and desertion, indignities to person, and every other lawful cause for a separation sink into insignificance under the daily grind of these.

MAY GO SMOOTHLY

And yet if mercy is properly strained, if one remembers not to choke at the gnat and swallow the camel, things may go on rather evenly.

Even you and I may have faults, you know, sister.

I don't know whether all my women readers feel as I do or not. But I've always liked to conquer circumstances. And never have I felt better than when finally the last bit of fence was down between me and some petty prejudice against another human being. I've made myself SWALLOW HARD many times, and have felt jubilant the next day.

And if we can do such things with the outside world, why not begin AT HOME?

Why not begin on that man of yours?

HUGS GRIEVANCE

You both had foreign parents. Think how hard it must have been for these couples to adjust themselves not only to each other, but a new country. You have nothing like that, sister.

You groan and wonder why it is parents are anxious to marry off daughters, and so young. That was your case. No doubt, heredity had told them it was the wise thing. And in the long run, they may be right, death and a gravestone, and children marching on to new lives. These things alone will tell.

This man of yours never thinks of holidays and birthdays. He never goes anywhere, and sits at home, and is a bump on the log. You crave to be on the outside, looking in, once in a while. And you hug this grievance, until everyone outside seems to be having a grand time, and you and your man the only ones who are disconsolate.

He isn't affectionate enough. He doesn't sympathize. He's a law in many ways unto himself. Yet he provides for you. And attends to his own business. He gets in no man's way, and is a good citizen.

You would have gone your own way long ago. But there were your parents, but now they are safely buried. Then your children. They are young and needed your attention, and this winter as it dragged by had to be endured, at least until school was out.

And now you ask me what to do. If Miss Brunot only will take the responsibility of saying so, your knapsack will be on your back.

But you aren't going to get me in such a position, sister.

For next year's schooling is paramount. There is the neighborhood, and that man of yours being a good citizen. The movie house around the corner won't seem so attractive when you're on the highway. Even hiking and an occasional lift, and a new friend who charms and flatters. These will stale in time.

BETTER THING TO DO

You'd find yourself wondering what that man of yours is doing. The unpleasant things in your past will rise up and grip and strangle you, and the new bread will choke in your throat.

That man of yours depends upon you even more than you depend on him.

So, instead of leaving entirely, put on your hat one evening out of the week, and declare your evening off. Go to the movies, call on neighbors. Make your own circle, and enjoy it . . .

But don't leave altogether.

We can hold to much in life which is ours really, and still glimpse into other things.

But don't let your home door shut on you.

For it is your door. Your children will come in and out of that door until they have doors of their own.

And that man of yours. He could be worse. He could be in jail. Or quarreling with his neighbor. Or filling your home with male riff-raff.

He could be egging you on, until you were worn to a frazzle.

Thank God, you are the one who eggs. Not he.

ONLY SUBTLE WOMAN CAN HELP HUSBAND SAYS FAY KING

By FAY KING

Helping a husband to success is a delicate and dangerous business.

Unless she can do this without him realising it, better leave well enough alone.

Men resent being obligated to any women. This pride is often mistaken for lack of appreciation, and gratitude.

Then the helpful wife bursts forth with the usual tirade:

"I made you what you are. You owe everything to me! Where would you be today but for me?"

After which she may as well kiss him goodby, for he has practically gone out of her life.

We can point to many such successful men who turned from their helpful wives.

Why drain your husband for some other woman? Alas, many wives have done so and lived to regret it.

CLOTHES THAT KEEP YOUNGSTERS COOL

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE BACK-TO-NATURE movement among the practically youngest set is highly successful this season, sartorially speaking. Shorts and halters are enthusiastically hailed for beach wear, while dungaree hish overalls are accepted as sandpile and garden outfits.

You'd laugh to see the beach robes (which can double for nursery business) made of terry cloth or gingham or light flannel, in the collegiate manner, and this business of the bare, bronzed torso above man-tailored shorts is quite the thing among many of the lads.

* * *

THE GIRLS are taking up shorts, too, wearing pullovers of fisherman striped cotton or cotton kerchief halters above them, and like their older sisters, they have swiped the beach robes originally designed for males. Their frocks follow the seersucker vogue, and they go their elders one better by chopping off the skirts of same until they nearly intrude on the sun back necklines.

For ice cream and cake occasions, there are plenty of pert frocks made of lawn, dimity, organza or dotted Swiss, mostly with that dressmaker touch which means so much to the well-dressed siren. Short pants of white linen duck, topped by thin white shirts, is the proper uniform for swains at high-hat birthday revels.

* * *

MOTHERS WHO FAIL for this line of merchandise should be warned that it takes some co-operation from the skin to get away with it. Exposing large areas of youthful complexion to sudden summer sunlight can be a painful, dangerous proceeding. Easy does it, and since all infant clothes are made these days of tubable, color-fast fabric, the safe thing to do is to smear each small body in a good, protective sun oil, and wash out what residue sticks to the garment. Equal parts of linseed oil and lime water is fine, home grown sun oil which skin absorbs by the bucket, doing wonderful work.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Hugh Calms Terror-Stricken Madge

I cannot describe the feeling of relief that went over me as I saw the tumbled bed clothing and the two empty cots in the bungalow. A similar sight in the nursery, when I had discovered Junior and Roderick were not in their beds, had left me shaking with terror. But this new discovery, together with what we had learned of the tracks of four bicycles going out the gate, told me that at least the two small boys were not alone on their mysterious errand.

Hank and Bill, both strong and athletic boys who could give a good account of themselves in an emergency, were with the smaller boys.

Or were they?

I remembered with fresh terror what I had seen at Katie's instance — the tracks of the smaller tires crossing and superimposing upon the others in such fashion as to make it plain that the larger bicycles had gone out first and that the others had followed them.

How long after the older boys had left had the younger ones followed them?

"Hugh!" I said faintly, and, though he was in the next room, he was at my side almost instantly.

"What is it?" he said, his strong hands closing firmly over my shaking fingers.

"Hank and Bill went first. You know—you saw the tracks. Do you suppose Junior and Roderick followed right after them, or were they a long way behind them? If they weren't close to them—anything may have happened."

"And nothing at all did." Hugh spoke with such cheery conviction that it was almost impossible to doubt his promise. But I was too nervously tense to be reassured about anything.

CLUE FOUND

"I can't stop here," I cried. "I must follow those bicycle tracks and see where they lead."

"And so you shall," Hugh promised soothingly. "But you are not fit to walk. I'll drive you in Bob's roadster — it's handy—and you'll have a chance to watch Jim and Katie at work. You won't miss a thing, and the first time the tracks turn we'll turn, too. How's that?"

Imperceptibly my tension lessened, at least to a point where I could obey without protesting.

"I'll do whatever you say," I told him, turning in the door. "Have you found any trace of the boys here, or where they might have gone?"

"They are not in the bungalow, that is certain," Hugh replied, as he caught step with me. "And the only thing I found which looks anything like a clue is this."

I stopped on my way to the door and faced him, startled by the remembrance of the signaling lights my mother-in-law had said she had seen.

"Do you realize that we decided the signals Mother Graham saw must have come from the bungalow?" I asked.

"Yes, and the windows where I found this is the only one from which the signals could have come, if your mother-in-law described them correctly."

"Oh! I am sure she did," I said hastily. "She is always accurate."

"Yes, I am sure she would be," he returned. But I had a queer little feeling that he was simply talking against time.

HUGH REASSURES HER

We had reached the porch of the bungalow as he spoke, and he closed the door after him, and then, putting his hand beneath my elbow again, steered me to Bob's runabout, which was the car nearest the road.

"Key's right in it," he said as we reached it. "Those youngsters never think of taking them out, but this time I approve their carelessness."

"Oh! Look!" I exclaimed, pointing to the figures of Jim and Katie, now rapidly receding down the road. "They are going toward Bridgehampton, Not Sag Harbor, and the next turn is only a few feet away. We must hurry."

"Foolish child," Hugh smiled at me tenderly. "Do you think we shall not be able to catch up to them, if they are on foot, and we are in a car?"

The tone more than the words was like a sudden spray of cold water, although I knew Hugh meant it for anything but that. It was suddenly borne in upon me, however, that my frayed nerves and my terror formed no excuse for my acting like the babyish, helpless women whom I have often despised.

I realized something else, also, and my face flamed at the realization. This helpless dependence of mine was directly encouraging Hugh to a tenderness he would not have shown if I had been my usual self.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Flat Foot Is Too Often Neglected in Children

Neglect of flat foot in children is a mistake. The trouble can be corrected and should be. If neglected and the child matures with this defect, undoubtedly he will be subject to other physical disabilities that will interfere with his health and happiness.

Dr. Copeland

Flat foot, also known as "splay foot," "pronated foot" or "fallen arches," is the name given to what really is a weak foot. It is a common affliction in childhood and is often acquired in adult life. It may be the result of overweight, faulty posture, improper footgear or standing for many hours daily without rest.

When flat foot is seen in children it is usually a hereditary condition. Indeed it is frequently spoken of as a family disease. This type of flat foot is one that can be completely cured when recognized in early childhood, if proper measures are taken. Unfortunately, flat foot in an adult is difficult to cure, although its effects can be greatly relieved.

I am often asked what shoes are recommended for a child who has flat foot. I am glad to say that most manufacturers of children's shoes have carefully studied this problem. In consequence, children's shoes are carefully planned to permit normal growth and development of the feet. The shoe should be properly fitted, and providing ample room for the toes. The arch should fit snugly and the heel should be low and flat.

If the child has flat foot and turns his toes outward it is advisable to place a wedge in the heel of the inner aspect. If advanced flat foot is present, it may also be advisable to raise the inner part of the sole. The wedge may vary from one-sixteenth of an inch to one-fourth of an inch. The wedge elevates the inner side of the foot and throws the weight outward. This strengthens the arch and helps overcome the weakness of the foot.

In older children, special foot exercises are of great value in correcting flat foot. The simplest and most beneficial exercise is rising on the toes, letting the weight down first on the outer margin of the sole and then on the heel. This practice should be repeated about 10 times a day and gradually increased to 20 times. Do not fatigue the child too much and only increase the number of exercises as the muscles become strengthened and the child becomes accustomed to them.

A good plan during the summer months when a beach is available, is to allow children to run around in the sand barefooted. But do not permit a flat footed child to run on hard soil or gravel without shoes. But the sand is beneficial as it molds the foot and gives it adequate support.

When in doubt consult with your physician. He will advise you as to the type shoe required and of the special exercises to take. Let me say again, never neglect flat foot in children.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Out to play in a nice frock makes a little girl feel grand. One such frock is in turquoise blue linen with a double scalloped yoke and collar embroidered at one side with a bunch of red cherries.

Flowers bloom on almost every smart evening dress just now. A new model is in pale violet-blue taffeta, the decolletage draped and ending in shoulder puffs. Between the bodice drape and the high waistline is a large bunch of violets. The slim skirt has a short train which flares in back.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By Josephine Culbertson

In playing a hand at a no-trump declaration, it is frequently of great importance to conceal strength in a suit chosen by the adversaries as the opening lead, in order to discourage a shift to another suit, in which only a single stopper is held. To gain time to establish a low card or cards as winners usually is vital to the fulfillment of such a contract. Where indeed are the hands which present us with nine tricks laid down? Mr. Carl S. Uhrig of Pittsfield, Mass., sent me the hand below, which is an apt illustration of the principle here discussed.

South's choice of a diamond as his opening bid was a happy one. Although the natural bid would be two notrump, South was a very firm believer in the Approach Principle and so chose the greatly shaded suit.

East opened the seven of clubs and after a study of the Dummy, North decided that probably diamonds were the best suit held by the adversaries, but that they probably were unaware of this fact. A shift to diamonds was of course quite clearly indicated, as the flimsiness of South's opening bid was now exposed on the board. However, if they could be persuaded to continue clubs, a low heart in the closed hand might be established for the game-going trick. So reasoning, North played the Queen of clubs from Dummy. Of course it held, but West read the play as a finesse. The Declarer now entered his hand by leading a low spade to the Ace and led a small heart. The finesse of the Queen lost to West's King, and West returned his last club, which was won in the Dummy with the Ace. The Ace of hearts was then led and the third round of hearts won by West's Jack. Now West shifted to a diamond, but it was too late. The club King, so wisely concealed, furnished the indispensable entry into the closed hand for the cashing of the thirteenth heart.

Had South been the Declarer at 3 notrump, he would have had a very difficult but rather pretty line of play, provided the diamond suit was opened. Assuming that the Jack of diamonds is opened, East must overtake with the Queen and return the suit. South can afford to win the second round because if East had three diamonds there would be only three diamond losers. After this the Declarer would try to establish the clubs and when this failed he would run three spade tricks and place West in the lead with a low diamond, thus forcing him to lead up to his heart tenace at the end.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Cut-In

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What does a girl say to a man she is dancing with when another man cuts in? F. M.

Since there is only a fraction of a minute in which to say anything, she says something to indicate that she has enjoyed the dance with him, "I enjoyed that dance so much," or "That was a delightful dance," or "That was delightful."

Anniversary Thoughts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a young business girl. I have the friendship of a very lovely couple of middle age, who are childless, and who have been very nice to me, and have done many nice things for me. The fact that they are well fixed financially prevents me from reciprocating.

However, they are going to have a wedding anniversary soon and I'd like to know if you think it would be all right for me to send them some flowers? Should I send them to the lady, or to both of them?

Please tell me what to say in a note to them. I would like the note to be very sweet, but not too personal. M.

I'd love to have you send a box of flowers to this kind and friendly couple as your bow of felicitations on this important occasion. Address your flowers and your note to the wife, but in your letter include your congratulations to both of them. I am sure that they will be deeply touched by your thought of them.

Maybe your letter might read like this:

Dear Mrs. Hill:

May I send you and Mr. Hill my bow of felicitations to you both on this so-important day of your lives? And will you let these posies bring you from me a message of my deep devotion to you both and my gratitude to you for the wonderful friendship that you have given me?

I pray that every minute of your anniversary will be happy and memory-making—and that there will be many, many more anniversaries of this sacred day for you two people who do so much to glorify the lives of your many friends.

Dearest greetings to you both.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Nothing so reveals a woman's taste as her choice of a perfume. If it is the kind that offends the human nose, the lady lacks breeding. If she skimps on soap and water, and substitutes perfume — but why speak about that?

Perfume bars—yes, they call them that — are offering new products that are as old-fashioned as hollyhocks. Sweet, lovely, wooday odors. They're reasonable in price. Think o' that, Thally.

With evening bodices not much more than a sample of satin and two shoulder straps, it is up to the emaciated femme to put padding on back, shoulders and arms.

This is the formula: nine hours of sleep, three hours of gentle exercise out of doors each day, a divorce from nerves and fretfulness, more starchy and sweet foods, one quart of milk a day with cream added.

At bedtime a bowl of crackers and milk.

SCHNADER HERE TO PLEAD FOR HARMONY

By MARK SHIELDS

Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican gubernatorial candidate, came to Pittsburgh today, in one hand a laurel wreath for those who backed him in the primary, in the other an olive branch for such Republicans as have thought the fruit of the Allegheny County organization tree tasted like green persimmons.

He was accompanied by M. Harvey Taylor, Republican state chairman, and Senator Harry B. Scott, of Centre County, candidate for Lieutenant Governor. Schnader and Taylor were guests of John Frazer, president of the Allegheny County Bar Association, at luncheon in the Duquesne Club, after which they were taken over by political leaders, headed by County Chairman William H. Coleman.

ALL FACTIONS ASKED

Republicans of all factions were invited to meet Schnader at a reception in the William Penn Hotel, and there were some private conferences. Judge Ralph H. Smith, Pinchot leader here, who supported Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon for the gubernatorial nomination, conferred with the Attorney General.

Smith made no commitment about support in November, and was reported to be still dissatisfied with the county leadership, as well as some of the associates of Schnader elsewhere in the state. He probably will follow the lead in the fall campaign of Gov. Pinchot, who has been maintaining silence as to his intentions.

Many supporters of Charles J. Margiotti, another Schnader primary opponent, met the candidate today. Among them was Attorney James H. Duff, western manager for Margiotti. Duff, also, made no commitment, and Margiotti remained away though he had been invited.

PLEDGES OFFERED

The reception rooms were crowded during the afternoon, and pledges of support were freely extended to the Attorney General by many who had opposed him in May. Senator James J. Coyne headed a delegation of his followers, who backed Schnader in the primary.

A bright spot in the Schnader visit was news that the officers and directors of the Women's Republican Club of Western Pennsylvania, meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. A. W. Powell, declared for the entire Republican ticket. There was some discussion of objections to the make-up of the county organization, raised by a group of independent Republican women, but the club heads decided not to participate further in any conferences which might arouse factional differences.

Schnader professed satisfaction with the outlook in the state. He re-emphasized that he would conduct his campaign on state issues, and subordinate the Roosevelt recovery policies in his speeches. The Attorney General will speak tomorrow at Independence Day exercises in Beaver.

CIRCUS CANNON FIRES 2 MEN

Bigger and more colorful than ever before! In tempered language, that's what the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus moguls think of this year's show.

The circus will roll into town early Thursday morning for performances at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. at Exposition Park, North Side, then will move over to the East Liberty show grounds for Friday and Saturday shows.

It used to be a spectacle of no little magnitude when one man was shot from a cannon. But now, in line with the policy of bigger and better things, two men are shot forth. Yes, sir, Hugo and Victor Zacchini are projected with a deafening roar clear across the tent.

If that doesn't impress you, consider this: The Otari troupe of aerialists will cut curlicues and arabesques through the thin ether in every direction. And oh, yes, there'll be a string of elephants reaching from here to there.

PLANE LEAVES HERE, CRASHES

MOBILE, Ala., July 3.—(AP.)—Lieut. R. M. Lundgren, of Pittsburgh, early today landed his fire-enveloped plane in a swamp 10 miles north of Mt. Vernon and escaped with only minor injuries.

Lungren, a former Army pilot, was ferrying a new ship to San Antonio from Pittsburgh for the Transcontinental Western Airways when it took fire above the swamp.

The aviator said he believed sparks from a loose manifold had ignited gasoline dripping from the carburetor, causing the ship to become enveloped in flames.

Lundgren, slightly bruised after the landing, stumbled to the Southern Railway tracks, where he caught a freight train into Mobile and reported to police.

The City-County Airport and Rogers and Bettis fields said they had no record of a Lieut. Lundgren flying from here. The Pittsburgh T. W. A. office said they had nobody by that name in their employ.

THREE RECOVER FROM POISON

Three young women were recovering in hospitals today after they had swallowed poison.

Mary Toninoce, 17, of Donora, was found unconscious in the bathroom of the home of H. Haber, 2001 Center avenue, where she is employed as a maid, and was taken to Passavant Hospital. The police reported she left this note:

"My life is no good to anybody. Mrs. Haber is a very good woman. I love my mother."

Mrs. Ruth Perry, 29, of 676 Baldwin road, Hays, was found by her husband, unconscious on the kitchen floor. She was removed to South Side Hospital.

The third victim was Mary O'Toole, 17, ward of Gumbert Industrial Home, who was taken to Allegheny General Hospital from the home, when she was found suffering from poisoning.

Trouble with this killing a guy to get rid of him, there never was a fellow killed that didn't leave some friends. Well, they will have to get their trouble in Germany over with pretty soon, for its just breaking France's heart? In fact, I expect they are feeling so bad they are offering ammunition and free burial to both sides. Yours, WILL.

Col. Buehler succeeds Albert J. Sartori, of Spokane, Wash.

United States Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, for 28 years a leader in the order, asked the convention to relieve him of some of his duties as director-general of the Moose, especially those calling for extended travel.

A resolution was passed by the convention thanking Senator Davis for his services to the order and wishing him continued health, and "the hope that he may long be spared to exemplify the principles of Mooseheart and Moosehaven, of which he is the guiding spirit."

YOUTH GUNNING FOR MOTHER

CHICAGO, July 3.—(AP.)—A 15-year-old boy, who started out with a newly purchased automobile and his father's pistol to seek his runaway mother, was interrupted today by state troopers at St. Joseph, Mich., Chicago police were notified today.

Taking the $670 which his father received as a soldier bonus months ago and kept in a tin box at home, Charles Reinhart last night bought an automobile. In a paper-wrapped bundle he carried his father's Army pistol.

James Reinhart, the father, last night showed the police a note which read:

"I'm going out to get her and I won't come back until I find her."

Reinhart said his wife had left home two months ago with another man.

WOMAN JAILED, DIES IN CELL

Mrs. Myrtle Kenny, 52, of 1105 Sherman avenue, was pronounced dead last night at Allegheny General Hospital, 12 hours after her arrest on a charge of drunkenness, according to the Coroner's report.

Mrs. Kenny was lodged in the matron's department of the North Side Police Station after her arrest at Federal and Ohio streets yesterday morning, police said. The matron later ordered her removal to the hospital. After receiving treatment at the hospital, the woman was returned to the police station. Three hours later the matron was unable to arouse Mrs. Kenny. On the second trip to the hospital Mrs. Kenny was pronounced dead.

The body was taken to the morgue for an autopsy. It revealed she had died of alcoholism and tuberculosis.

Reserve Officers to Hold Outing July 14

The annual outing of Pittsburgh Chapter, Reserve Officers' Association, will be held in the CCC camp, South Park, July 14. Officers of the reserve announced that due to a request from County Commissioners the date of the dedication of the Joyce Kilmer memorial in South Park has been changed to August 28, the opening day of the second Allegheny County fair.

COUNTY TO ASK MORE FUNDS FROM PWA

The County Commissioners will re-apply for public works loans for the Saw Mill Run boulevard improvement, the Jerome street (McKeesport) widening and construction, and the lakes in North Park, Commissioner C. C. McGovern said today.

But they will be sought as individual projects, after the present $24,500,000 have been settled, the contracts signed and the details out of the way.

The three improvements were vetoed by public works engineers last week and cut from the $30,000,000 program.

Commissioner William D. Mansfield explained that the Jerome Street Bridge over the Youghiogheny River would halt dead at Market street, McKeesport, unless Jerome street were widened. He said:

"We might persuade the government to give us at least part of the money. The reason it was eliminated is because between 60 and 70 per cent of the cost of the street widening would go for property condemnation, and the purpose of the PWA money is to aid unemployment and business.

"But there are several alternatives. The County Commissioners could consider bonds. The bridge without Jerome street would only collect one-fifth the tolls, according to my guess."

The improvement of the Saw Mill Run boulevard is one of Commissioner McGovern's favored projects, while Commissioner C. M. Barr would like to see the government loan the money for the lakes in North Park. A swimming pool and water line project was approved—the only one in the nation accepted, it was learned.

DEMMLER, KANE HECKLED IN MANCHESTER

Several hundred hooting and booing Manchester residents last night drowned out the attempts of Councilmen Walter R. Demmler and John J. Kane to explain their vote for the Manchester incinerator site at a protest meeting in the North Side Arena.

The two Councilmen, invited to speak, were forced away from the microphone by the angry crowd.

Kane spoke long enough, however, to become embroiled with the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church. Kane started to say:

"During the campaign I pledged myself to oppose special interests and monopolies. The first thing I did was advocate a tax on public utilities . . ."

REPLIES TO PASTOR

Dr. Shelton interrupted him. Kane retorting:

"Listen doctor, if I am going to talk, I'll talk my own speech."

Kane described the "garbage collecting monopoly as the greatest in the city," but his reference to the Manchester site was drowned out by jeers.

Demmler fared little better. He started:

"Citizens and friends—"

His words were drowned out, finally he said:

"There is no reason to go on. If I have injured anyone by my manner I apologize. No injury was intended."

PROTESTS ORGANIZED

The meeting adopted two resolutions calling for the appointment of one committee of 15 to file a formal protest against the Reedsdale and Chateau streets site and another to urge Mayor McNair to veto the incinerator legislation Thursday.

Protests from citizens of East Liberty, Aspinwall, Oakmont, Morningside, Shadyside, and the Larimer and Lincoln avenue districts are to deluge the Mayor and Council as result of a mass meeting last night in the Peabody High School. Attorney W. Clyde Grubbs was chairman. Albert Eber was chairman of the North Side meeting.

"Why don't you tell people with sensitive throats about Old Golds?"

asks Dick Barthelmess

[AN OLD GOLD SMOKER SINCE 1928]

Dear Mr. Barthelmess:—

People who watch their throats should not delay trying Old Golds. Once they've given this throat-ease cigarette a real tryout—you can bet they'll never be weaned away.

They'll find that Old Golds are made with smoother, mellower tobaccos—notably free from rasp and bite. Non-irritating even to the most delicate throat.

Thanks for the suggestion, Mr. Barthelmess. We've adopted it—as you see. And you may be the means of bringing new throat comfort and enjoyment to "people with sensitive throats."

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Bruins Poison to Beans. Shift Assault to Paul. Rout Dizzy Five Times. | Trosky's Strange Start. Mystery of Turf Names. Cotton Studious Golfer.

The pitching system employed by the Dean brothers to tie most of the other National League clubs into knots apparently does not work against the Cubs. The success of the Bruins in handing a beating to Paul Dean yesterday may indicate that they are going to include the younger brother in the batting assaults they have carried on against Dizzy. At any rate, it was the first time Paul lost a game started by himself since he came up to the majors last spring. The two other defeats charged against him while he was piling up 10 victories were suffered in relief roles. He beat the Bruins in one previous meeting.

Babe Herman

On July 30, last year, Dizzy humiliated the Cubs by amassing 17 strikeouts at their expense, including three against Babe Herman, to set a new modern major league record. Evidently, Babe and the rest of the Bears then and there vowed vengeance on the house of Dean, for since that day they have beaten Dizzy five straight times, and chased him out of another game that was recorded against Tex Carleton. In every one of Dizzy's last five starts against Charley Grimm's men, they knocked him out of the box, his longest stay being six innings. Three of the six games lost by the Deans this year were dropped to Chicago. At that, the Cubs do not hold the best record in the league for success against Dizzy. That belongs to the Braves, who have lost only one game to him while beating him seven times.

TROSKY STARTS AS CROSS-HAND HITTER

While in the Missouri Valley League, Trosky switched to the opposite side of the plate and began to hit left-handed. It was unnecessary to change his grip, as swinging from the left side made his original hold on the bat a natural and orthodox one. Hal took to left-hand hitting so readily that he hit .323 for Toledo last season, his 149 hits including 33 home runs, five triples and 25 doubles, and now he is keeping it up in a way that makes him one of the most feared sluggers in the American League. Incidentally, like Babe Ruth, Bill Terry, Lefty O'Doul and some other fine hitters who shifted to different positions, Trosky started as a pitcher.

LOSS OF JURGES THIRD BLOW TO BRUINS

If the Cubs succeed in their efforts to give Chicago its fourteenth National League pennant this year, it can't be said that they were given much help by the baseball fates. The loss of Shortstop Bill Jurges for at least two months as the result of an operation for appendicitis was the third serious blow of the season to Charley Grimm's club. First a sprained ankle, suffered in sliding into the plate, kept Billy Herman away from his second-base post for three weeks, and later Guy Bush, the team's most dependable pitcher at the time and a steady winner, was on the shelf for a similar period because of a torn muscle in his right side.

Bill Jurges

While admitting that the Cubs are fortunate in having another fine shortstop in Woody English, Manager Grimm does not underestimate the loss the Bruins have suffered in being deprived of the services of Jurges. He ranks Jurges as the best fielding shortstop in the league at present, and says Bill had been particularly valuable before he was stricken because he was winning games with long and timely hits. However, Grimm and President William Walker hold that it would have been unfair to the player to delay the operation; that Jurges has 10 big years ahead of him in baseball, and that it would have been unwise to jeopardize his future by nursing him through this season.

FIRST NAMES OF MANY JOCKEYS UNKNOWN

In most sports the first names of the star performers are as well known as their family names to the rank and file of fandom. But that doesn't apply to the general field of jockeys in the horseracing game. Of course, the topnotchers have been exceptions. The public has been well acquainted with their first names or nicknames, down through Fred Archer, Snapper Garrison, Jimmy McLaughlin, Isaac Murphy, Tod Sloan, Earl Sande, Pony McAtee, Sonny Workman, Mack Garner and others.

But in many of the present-day meetings, race followers are still trying to learn the names of the majority of the jockeys. It seems unusual that horesmen are content with knowing the riders only by their first initials, as M. Peters, H. Hughes, G. Haines, P. Sage, and so on. Yet there are horsemen who know these boys very well, but never have bothered to learn any more than the names as they are listed on the board. Sometime there may be a campaign for a new system to establish the fact that jockeys actually have first names, and not merely single initials.

WILL TO LEARN MAKES COTTON CHAMPION

Henry Cotton, hailed as the world's new super golfer, who broke America's 10-year grip on the British open championship, is one of the most studious, determined and methodical young men in the game. American professionals agree that Cotton is a vastly improved shotmaker over the player who made a swing around the United States winter circuit in 1929. They recall that he was quiet and studious even then, and eager to learn the fine points of golf as it was played in this country.

Henry Cotton

After he returned to Europe to take his post as pro at the Waterloo Club, in Brussels, Cotton almost daily practiced strokes for hours. He had the will to learn, and kept working at every kind of shot until he could make it without apparent effort. Now he has attained such perfection that spectators complain it is almost monotonous to follow him around a course. It looks as though he has a string attached to the ball and can place it in any desired spot. The accuracy of his approaches in the British open was such that he seldom left himself more than a three or four-foot putt once he reached the greens.

MARATHON RACE WINNER IN REGATTA

Three more star drivers have sent in their entries for the William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup outboard motorboat regatta to be held at Oakmont one week from next Saturday and Sunday under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Oakmont Boat Club, including among them the winner of the annual marathon chase of 132 miles from Albany to New York in May.

VETERAN AT 23

Johnson at the age of 23 is a veteran of eight years' racing experience. He entered the sport while attending high school and continued while a student at New York Military Academy, where he gained fame as a "watch charm" football halfback. He is only 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs only 123 pounds. In winning the Albany-to-New York marathon he beat a field of 71 other drivers and was congratulated at the finish by none other than Gar Wood, the master racer of them all. Gar Wood, Jr., finished ninth in this race.

The eastern star will race in three amateur classes here, having entered boats in the A, C and F divisions. The boat in which he won the marathon is named the Dorchart III, after his wife, Doris, and his own nickname. He will bring it here for the big event, and hopes to carry off the huge gold cup, which goes to the amateur driver scoring the most points in the two days' carnival of speed and thrills.

RADIO PROGRAM TONIGHT

Other new entries are those of J. C. Walier, Jr., of Syracuse, who is passing up the long-established Buffalo Launch Club regatta on the same days to race here, and Edward C. Sasnett, of Washington, D. C., professionals. The former will race in all classes and the latter in the C and F classes, which are for the fastest boats.

Jimmy Altman, of New Kensington, crack district amateur driver, will be heard with Jim Hays, the Aircaster, over WCAE at 6:30 o'clock tonight, telling of the thrills to be expected in the Sun-Telegraph's spectacular presentation to the sports fans.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A RAPHAEL FOR A DOLLAR—The Ritratto del Fattorino, representing Raphael's pupil, Giovanni Penni, whose nickname was "Il Fattorino," was painted by the master in 1412 and was lost for more than 400 years. It was found in Naples in 1816, having been sold at auction for one scudo (about a dollar). The last sale of a privately owned portrait by Raphael, a few years ago, is said to have realized about $600,000.

THURSDAY (NO ISSUE TOMORROW): FINANCIER OF FREEDOM

HEINIE HELPS WAITE MASTER 'SLIDER'

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

As the Pirates took on the lowly Reds today in the first clash of a three-game series, which includes the holiday morning and afternoon games of tomorrow, the home clubhouse was still agog over the clever pitching of Waite Hoyt.

If you are a devoted follower of the Pirates you will be interested in the new chapter in the life of the famous Brooklyn schoolboy, who several years ago was shunted out of the American League by the very men who saw Waite in the stretch of years when he was rated as one of the game's best hurlers.

Anyhow, Hoyt found a haven in the senior circuit, although he was washed about on the perilous rocks of Brooklyn and New York before he climbed aboard the Pirate brig and set himself.

GIVES HEINIE CREDIT

The fine cameraderie existing among the members of the Pittsburgh club at present is partly responsible for the fact that Hoyt's star is in the ascendency again. One of the principal promoters of the good fellowship is Herr Meine, the crown prince of Luxemburg.

If you talk with Hoyt he will pay a compliment to Meine as a result of a new trick taught the one veteran by the other. To get down to cases, Heinie has taught Hoyt how to throw his famous "slider" ball, a keen pitch which had been a part of Waite's repertoire this year.

Meine used the same pitch with much effectiveness when he was one of the outstanding pitchers of the league. It is a fine offering to mix with a fast ball like the one owned by Hoyt or by Meine, when Heine is in good health.

Heine's deceptive pitch is really a curve ball that "slides" rather instead of ending in a "hook." Batters pop it up consistently, Hoyt noting that Heine was getting a lot of mean hitters out with the serving.

Waite became so infatuated with the pitch he remarked to Meine:

"Heine, would it be asking too much to have you show me how you throw that slider?"

Meine's reply was:

"Waite, you've been a much better pitcher than I have been, and I don't wish to be put in the position of saying I can show you anything, but if my slider will help you, I will work on it with you until you get it perfected."

FAST BALL STILL GOOD

Hoyt is getting along fine with the pitch. Waite naturally has lost some of the zip that once made his curve ball a feared thing in the American League, but he retains his "swifter." His control, courage, knowledge of pitching and his other attributes to make him one of the standout pitchers of the Pittsburgh club.

Manager Pie Traynor, of the Pirates, was the guest of honor at a buffet dinner given the members of the Pittsburgh Chapter Baseball Writers' Association of America by the management of the Pittsburgher Hotel last night. Pie was presented a gentleman's traveling set by the Pittsburgh scribes. William E. Benswanger, president of the Pirates, and S. E. Watters, vice president, also attended.

SEMI-FINALS CARDED TODAY IN COUNTY TENNIS TOURNEY

BILL HASELTINE FACES DAVID O'LOUGHLIN

MATCHES TODAY

3:30 p. m.—Men's doubles, semi-final round: Frank Broida and Robert L. Madden vs. W. Russell Unger and Edgar Alcorn. Mixed doubles matches.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Brilliant tennis looms for Earl Anderson's well-groomed Westinghouse Club rectangles in Forest Hills out the Greensburg pike late this afternoon with semi-final men's singles contests of the annual Allegheny County championships featuring the pre-holiday bill. Frank Broida, Belmont southpaw ace and top seeded contestant, engages Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star, in the curtain-raiser at 5 o'clock, with Bill Haseltine, Philadelphian, holder of the county crown, encountering Dr. Dave O'Laughlin, 1933 runner-up, at 6 in the other penultimate fray. Final jousts in all divisions of play are slated for tomorrow afternoon.

Dave O'Loughlin consumed little time in disposing of the aspirations of the slashing Bobby Grier, Rockwood portsider, 6-1, 6-0. Grier's style of attack is similar to that of the Winged Header, but he lacks his opponent's poise and experience and yesterday committed a host of errors both forced and gratuitous.

In the men's doubles semi-final frame, the O'Loughlins disposed summarily of Haseltine and his cagy Greensburg partner, Tack Hammer, 6-2, 6-3.

Broida and Madden were wild enough to make the going torrid for themselves in their quarter-final fray with Tournament Chairman Howard Clark and the writer, but at length triumphed, 6-3, 10-8, in spite of Clark's fine forehand driving that repeatedly trapped them on the way to the net.

Dolly Harris, hard-driving Edgewood girl, rallied to down Miriam Sullivan, P. A. A. entrant and number two on the feminine seeded roster, 6-8, 6-2, 6-4, in protracted semi-final encounter. The Edgewooder will oppose Mrs. Jean Artzberger, defending premiere, in the wind-up. Yesterday's summary:

MEN'S SINGLES

STARS TO PLAY IN TOURNEY

The opening of entries for the renewal of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh Public Parks tennis championships yesterday lent added impetus to the already heated interest in the county-wide municipal racquet classic. Even thus early a host of aspiring racqueters have signified intent to be in the lists when competition gets under way on Tuesday, July 17, and, if advance indications may be taken as criterion, the coming conclave should outdo even the best of its predecessors both numerically and in general quality of play.

It will be determined finally today whether or not preliminary jousting will be conducted in both North and South parks. With plans definitely made for staging hostilities in Riverview and West parks, it is probable that the North Side and the North Boroughs will be well provided for without extension of action to the newer of the county domains. South Park, of course, is certain to be a prominent center of combat.

Prospective entrants in the parks meeting are urged to submit their names to the tournament chairman without a delay. An official entry blank will be found printed elsewhere in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports section. It is absolutely necessary that these blanks be used in making entry. Positively no names will be taken by the phone.

Arrangements for the annual Western Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh Center junior and boys' championships were discussed at a luncheon of Chairman Hub Rinehart and his committeemen yesterday. The West Penn affair, which comes first, will be held on either the Carnegie Tech or the Pitt rectangles beginning on Monday, June 16.—PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Legion Vets in County Finals

BOB TAYLOR, CATCHER LEW KOSTYAL, LEFT FIELD CAPT. JACK ORR, SHORTSTOP

Three "veterans" of three years' experience each on the South Hills team which opens a series with Curtisville at Russelton this evening for the Allegheny County championship in the annual American Legion national junior baseball tournament. The second game will be played at Dormont Thursday and a third game, if necessary, at Aspinwall Saturday. The South Hills team went to the final round of the state eliminations at Reading last year and to the county finals the year before. Harry Brubaker is another three-year player on the team.

F. ZIVIC GIVEN WIN OVER RAN

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Cecil Payne vs. Andy Bundy, 10 rounds, Portland, Ore.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

They changed their mind at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night, and thereby made a mistake. They announced there would be a five-minute intermission before the main bout, and then called off the intermission and put on the main bout by mistake. The intermission, in the opinion of the spectators, who did plenty of booing at the end of almost every round, would have been better. Or maybe it was the intermission they were watching, misnamed the main bout.

Well, anyway, the largest crowd of the open-air season here turned out to see how much Fritzie Zivic had improved on his jaunt to California with his brother, Eddie, who won a sensational 10-round battle with Joey Costa, of New York, in the same ring a week ago. Fritzie was in with Eddie Ran, Polish veteran from Chicago, and Eddie won the bout with something to spare, but the two judges agreed on Zivic as the winner, while the decision of Referee Al Grayber for Ran didn't count. Result: More booing at the finish.

VERY TAME BOUT

It was the tamest main event staged here in a long, long time. Ran had little but his experience and a sloppy right to the head and an ability to punch away to the body in close, while Fritzie had a pair of gloves on his hands and the crowd on his neck because of his inability to do anything worth mentioning. At 139 pounds, Fritzie was listless, apparently overtrained and stale. He couldn't straighten out a left hand, and his hooks had no steam behind them. He continually maneuvered to get in to close quarters and then didn't do anything. He wasn't half the boxer or fighter he was before he went away, and he was in trouble throughout the ninth round, when Ran clipped him with a hard right along the ropes early and followed up the advantage and had him hanging on most of the round.

There wasn't much to choose between them in the first two rounds. Fritzie managed to eke out shades in the next four mainly because Ran was unable to do anything himself, and then Ran came on to carry the last four rounds. The ninth round was the only decisive one of the fight.

After the bout, Fritzie said he was too light at the weight and couldn't get going, but he thought he had won. Ran outweighed him by five and one-half pounds.

FIELDS BEATS PACE

Ross Fields, Weirton southpaw featherweight, came from behind in the last four rounds to punch his way to victory over Georgie Pace, promising young Cleveland Negro, in the eight-round semi-final, a good bout. Fields' experience enabled him to rally from Pace's harder punching at the start, and, in the fifth round, he turned the tide by weakening Pace with a body attack from which the latter never fully recovered. Pace knocked out Nat Litfin in one round at Hickey Park last week.

Charley Baxter outpunched Elmer Wilson. Charley Blozevich got an unearned decision over the cleverer Harry Krause and Paddy Gray and Dandy Allen boxed to a referee's draw in the five-round preliminaries.

Joe Orsini alternated with Al Grayber as referee and the judges were Carl Koehn and Stanley Phillips.

They are expected to give the veteran Noftz team a real battle at Marshall Field at 6:30 tomorrow evening. Henry Flowers will pitch for Goodwill.

William (Bid) Schwarzkopf, manager and coach of the St. Peterites softball team in the junior division, has been appointed athletic director of the Romney (W. Va.) Hack Wilson Bust As Pinch Hitter

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—Hack Wilson, portly outfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, finds base hits hard to get when he is called on for pinch-hitting duty.

When he grounded into a double play against the Phils yesterday it marked the eighth successive time Wilson has failed to hit as a pinch batsman.

'COMIC PARADE' TIME NEARS

Only 10 more days remain for boys and girls to file their entry blanks for a place in the Sun-Telegraph parade of the comics scheduled as the big event for the annual outing for the kiddies of Pittsburgh to be held at Kennywood Park, Friday, July 13.

There is every reason to believe that it is going to be a big, merry parade with scores of youngsters in line as Popeyes, Tillies, Mickey Mouses, Barney Googles, Skippys, Snuggins and Spike, Annie Rooneys, the Katzenjammer Kids and others of the many favorites in the comic pages of the daily and Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

There will be a lot of prizes for the best impersonations and when it is over two of the paraders—a boy and a girl—will be riding expensive bicycles. These are the first of many awards.

The first coupon for the strips of eight free tickets for Kennywood attractions will appear in the Sun-Telegraph next Friday. It will only require four coupons to get a strip of tickets. So start clipping your coupons next Friday. Exchange stations will be established throughout the Pittsburgh and McKeesport area where the coupons can be exchanged for the strips of free tickets. Fifteen-cent special street car passes for kiddies up to 16 years of age also will be on sale at these stations.

WRANGLES MARK TORRID PENNANT RACES IN MAJOR LEAGUES

STARS OUSTED IN DISPUTES WITH UMPS

Associated Press.

The heat, the humidity and two torrid pennant races are shortening baseball tempers these days. Players, managers and coaches, even aspersions on the eyesight of harassed umpires, are taking cold showers by emphatic request.

A half dozen argumentative principals have been summarily ejected from the ball parks in the last couple of weeks and yesterday Bill Klem calmly waved Manager Frank Frisch, Coach Mike Gonzales and Dizzy Dean, of the St. Louis Cardinals, to the clubhouse after they disputed his ruling on a play that paved the way for the Cardinals' 7-4 defeat by the Chicago Cubs. Lon Warneke went the route for the Cubs and allowed seven hits and no earned runs. Chicago's victory enabled the Cubs to remain within two games of the New York Giants, National League pace-setters, who walloped the Boston Braves, 7-4, as Joe Bowman pitched seven-hit ball. The Braves' defeat dropped them into fifth place, a few percentage points behind the idle Pittsburgh Pirates. Len Koenecke's two home runs helped the Brooklyn Dodgers top the Phillies, 7-5.

Lefty Grove's thirteenth triumph of the year against only two defeats marked the New York Yankees' 2-0 shutout of the Boston Red Sox. The victory, the Yankees' eighth in succession, enabled them to increase their lead over the Detroit Tigers to two games. The Tigers punched out 12 hits, while Tommy Bridges was allowing only six to beat the Cleveland Indians, 9-2, in the first game of a doubleheader, but Bob Holland's double in the ninth drove home Sammy Hale with the run that gave the Indians the second game, 6-5. Alphonse Thomas gave up seven hits and Red Kress, substitute first baseman, clouted two home runs as Washington beat the Athletics, 7-3, and returned to third place, the Red Sox dropping to fifth again. St. Louis and Chicago were idle.

SARAH PALFREY DEFEATED

WIMBLEDON, England, July 3.—(AP.)—Helen Hull Jacobs, the American champion and top-seeded favorite, today won her quarter-final match in the all-England tennis championships, but little Sarah Palfrey, the other American survivor, was eliminated by the veteran French woman, Mme. Rene Mathieu, 6-3, 6-8, 6-2.

Miss Jacobs won, 6-0, 6-2, over Cilli Aussem, former ranking player of Germany.

Before entering the center court, where a capacity crowd waited to give her an ovation, the California girl said she wished emphatically to deny a report originating in Boston that she was engaged to wed Sheldon Fisher.

What now is called the "tennis throat" here continued to take toll of some of the stars today when Enrique Maier, Spain's best player, was forced to withdraw. He and Elizabeth Ryan were to have met Lester Stoeffen and Carolin Babcock in the second round of the mixed doubles.

Joan Hartigan, sensational invader from Australia, who put out the seeded German favorite, Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, won her way to the semi-finals with another upset victory over Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, English girl who recently won the French championship, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1. She will meet Miss Jacobs.

Jack Crawford, defending champion from Australia, who yesterday defeated Lester Stoefen in the quarter-finals, was in bed today with a sore throat and a temperature of 100. He collapsed in his dressing room yesterday after his hard tussle with the American.

George Lott aind Lester Stoefen, America's ranking doubles team, defeated Kenneth C. Gandar and C. E. Malfroy, both former Cambridge captains, 6-4, 6-4, 6-8, 6-4 in a third-round match, but their team work was not impressive. Sidney B. Wood, Jr., and Richard Norris Williams, America's cup captain, defeated C. S. Hilton and A. Hulton, of England, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, in the second round.

The unseeded doubles pair of Harry Hopman, of Australia, and Dann Prenn, Germany, defeated the seeded team of George Patrick Hughes and Fred Perry, of England, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

The Misses Jacobs and Palfrey later paired to defeat Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall and Miss A. M. Yorke, British tandem, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, in a third-round match.

YORK, Pa., July 3.—Wild Bill Cummings, auto speedster who won the 500-mile classic at Indianapolis, will compete in the 100 laps of sprint racing at the York Fair Grounds tomorrow.

W. VA. GOLFERS RESUME PLAY

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 3.—(AP.)—The 52 entries in the annual West Virginia amateur golf tournament will clean up their qualifying play today in preparation for the match play opening tomorrow.

Although the 36-hole qualifying round started yesterday, many of the amateurs refused to face the scorching sun and elected to go the full route today.

Fred Bannerot, Jr., of Charleston, the defending champion, covered the entire 36 holes yesterday in 72-74—146 to take command of the field.

But Tom Bloch, of Wheeling, hung up a surprising 69, one under par, for his first 18. He will play the balance today.

Mother, Daughter Golf Opponents

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 3.—(AP.)—A mother and her daughter will vie against each other today in the opening round of match play in the annual West Virginia women's golf tourney.

Medalist honors in the qualifying play yesterday went to Miss Stifel after a 77, nine strokes ahead of the runnerup, Mrs. H. L. Pritchard, of Charleston.

Mrs. M. M. Moorhead, of Charleston, 88, vs. Mrs. R. N. Suffard, of Bluefield, 102.

Mrs. J. V. Ray, of Charleston, 90, vs. Miss Elizabeth Knight, of Charleston, 103.

Mrs. J. I. Markell, 94, vs. Mrs. Jack Hoblitzell, of Parkersburg, 88.

Mrs. H. L. Pritchard, of Charleston, 86, vs. Mrs. Philip Cochran, of Morgantown, 92.

Mrs. M. G. Geiger, of Charleston, 90, vs. Mrs. Angus MacDonald, of Charleston, 103.

Mrs. H. D. Everett, of Charleston, 92, vs. Mrs. Herbert Markle, of Bluefield, 103.

Mrs. John Tucker, of Wheeling, 100, vs. Mrs. Lois Rogers, of Parkersburg, 89.

SPORT SHORTS

SHARON, Pa.—Jack Russell is the latest entry in the automobile race to be staged at Sharon tomorrow.

PHILADELPHIA—Andy High, veteran major and minor league star, has been signed by the Philadelphia Phillies. He formerly played for Brooklyn and Cincinnati in the National League.

CHICAGO—Harry Cooper won the Illinois P. G. A. championship here yesterday when he defeated Dick Metz, of Chicago, in an 18-hole playoff match. In the playoff Cooper shot a par 74 to Metz's 81. They tied in the tournament proper with 149 strokes for 36 holes.

MEMPHIS—Nashville has been crowned the first-half champion of the Southern Association. The second half gets under way today. The winners will meet in a post-season playoff series at the close of the season.

CHICAGO—The Chicago White Sox have announced the release of Outfielder Bernie Duhl to Oakland, of the Pacific Coast League, the same club from which he was obtained.

DETROIT—Bill Bonthron, of this city, plans to retire in the fall for a career in accounting. He will not be a candidate for the 1936 Olympic team.

CASCADE, Md.—Thurman Randle, of Dallas, Tex., yesterday set a world record by firing 2 hours and 17 minutes before he missed a bullseye. He scored 196 before he missed his first.

CHICAGO.—(INS.)—Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson, former world heavyweight champions, and Tom Sharkey, who fought them both, were to arrive here today to serve as masters of ceremony at a series of boxing shows at the Century of Progress.

Cleveland-Pittsburgh finished fourth in the team event for men in the sixteenth triennial meet of the Swiss-American Gymnastic Union here yesterday. Hudson County, New Jersey, was the winner.

GRANT OPPOSES NET VETERAN

CHICAGO, July 3.—(AP.)—Walter Hayes, a veteran who won the title the same year Bryan (Bitsy) Grant was born, was given an opportunity today to stop the tiny Atlantan's rush toward the national clay court tennis championship on the Chicago Town and Tennis Club courts.

Hayes won the national clay court title twice—in 1911, the year Atlanta's Bitsy was born and in 1922. As Grant sat under a shade tree yesterday, loafing into the third round with a bye and a default, Hayes swept into the same round and into Grant's way by defeating Art Bakewell, Chicago youngster, 6-4, 6-3.

Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, defending champion, and the other seeded players expected nothing but easy sailing in their drive toward the fourth round.

All eight of the seeded stars came through with handy victories. Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, 1933 national intercollegiate champion, had the closest call, defeating Joe Carrigan, Chicago, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. The other seeded stars surviving, in addition to Grant, Parker and Tidball—the one, two, three men—were Gene Mako, Pasadena, Cal.; Donald Budge, Los Angeles; John McDiarmid, Fort Worth, Tex.; Lefty Bryan, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Karl Kamrath, of Austin, Tex.

LUTHER, ERATH, BLANTON WIN PRO BERTHS

By TOM BIRKS

Ted Luther, of Valley Heights; Toots Erath, of Edgewood, and Julius Blanton, of Parkersburg, W. Va., will represent the tri-state district in the National Professional Golfers' Association tournament, scheduled to get under way at the Park Club, Buffalo, on July 23.

The trio led the qualifiers in the 36-hole medal play test at the Edgewood Country Club yesterday.

Luther, continuing his brilliant play, led the field with a score of 70-72—142. Blanton scored 71-73—144 and Erath turned in a card of 74-71—145.

Blanton, virtually unknown in the district, proved the big surprise of the qualifying round. He turned in a fine 71 in the morning round.

Poor putting helped to keep Vincent Eldred, of Highland, out of the running. Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, and Johnny Capebianco, of Aliquippa, turned in fine 69s in the afternoon rounds, but their failure to make a showing in the first 18 holes ruined their chances of qualifying.

MAYBERRY DIES FOLLOWING OPERATION

MONONGAHELA, Pa., July 3.—Howard Mayberry, aged 30 years, well known in tri-state fistic circles and a former Canadian bantamweight champion, died in Memorial Hospital here last night as a result of injuries suffered when struck by an automobile last Armistice Day. Death followed the amputation of his left leg at the thigh.

Mayberry

Mayberry had been confined in the hospital since his injury and several blood transfusions were given him during the past few months. The last of these were necessary while he was on the operating table yesterday, his wife providing the blood.

Besides his wife, Mayberry leaves four children, John, William, Francis and Mary, his parents, four brothers and two sisters, all of Duluth, Minn.

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, New Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

I see the papers make a big fuss over the Prince of Wales being 40 years old and not married. Well, we can put this down in your little hat band: The man who has had the happiness that goes with raising children is farther ahead in the game of life than a king. This is not said against the Prince of Wales, who has a right to do what he wants to do and who has many admirers. It is said generally. The fellow who has a baby doesn't have to bow to royalty.

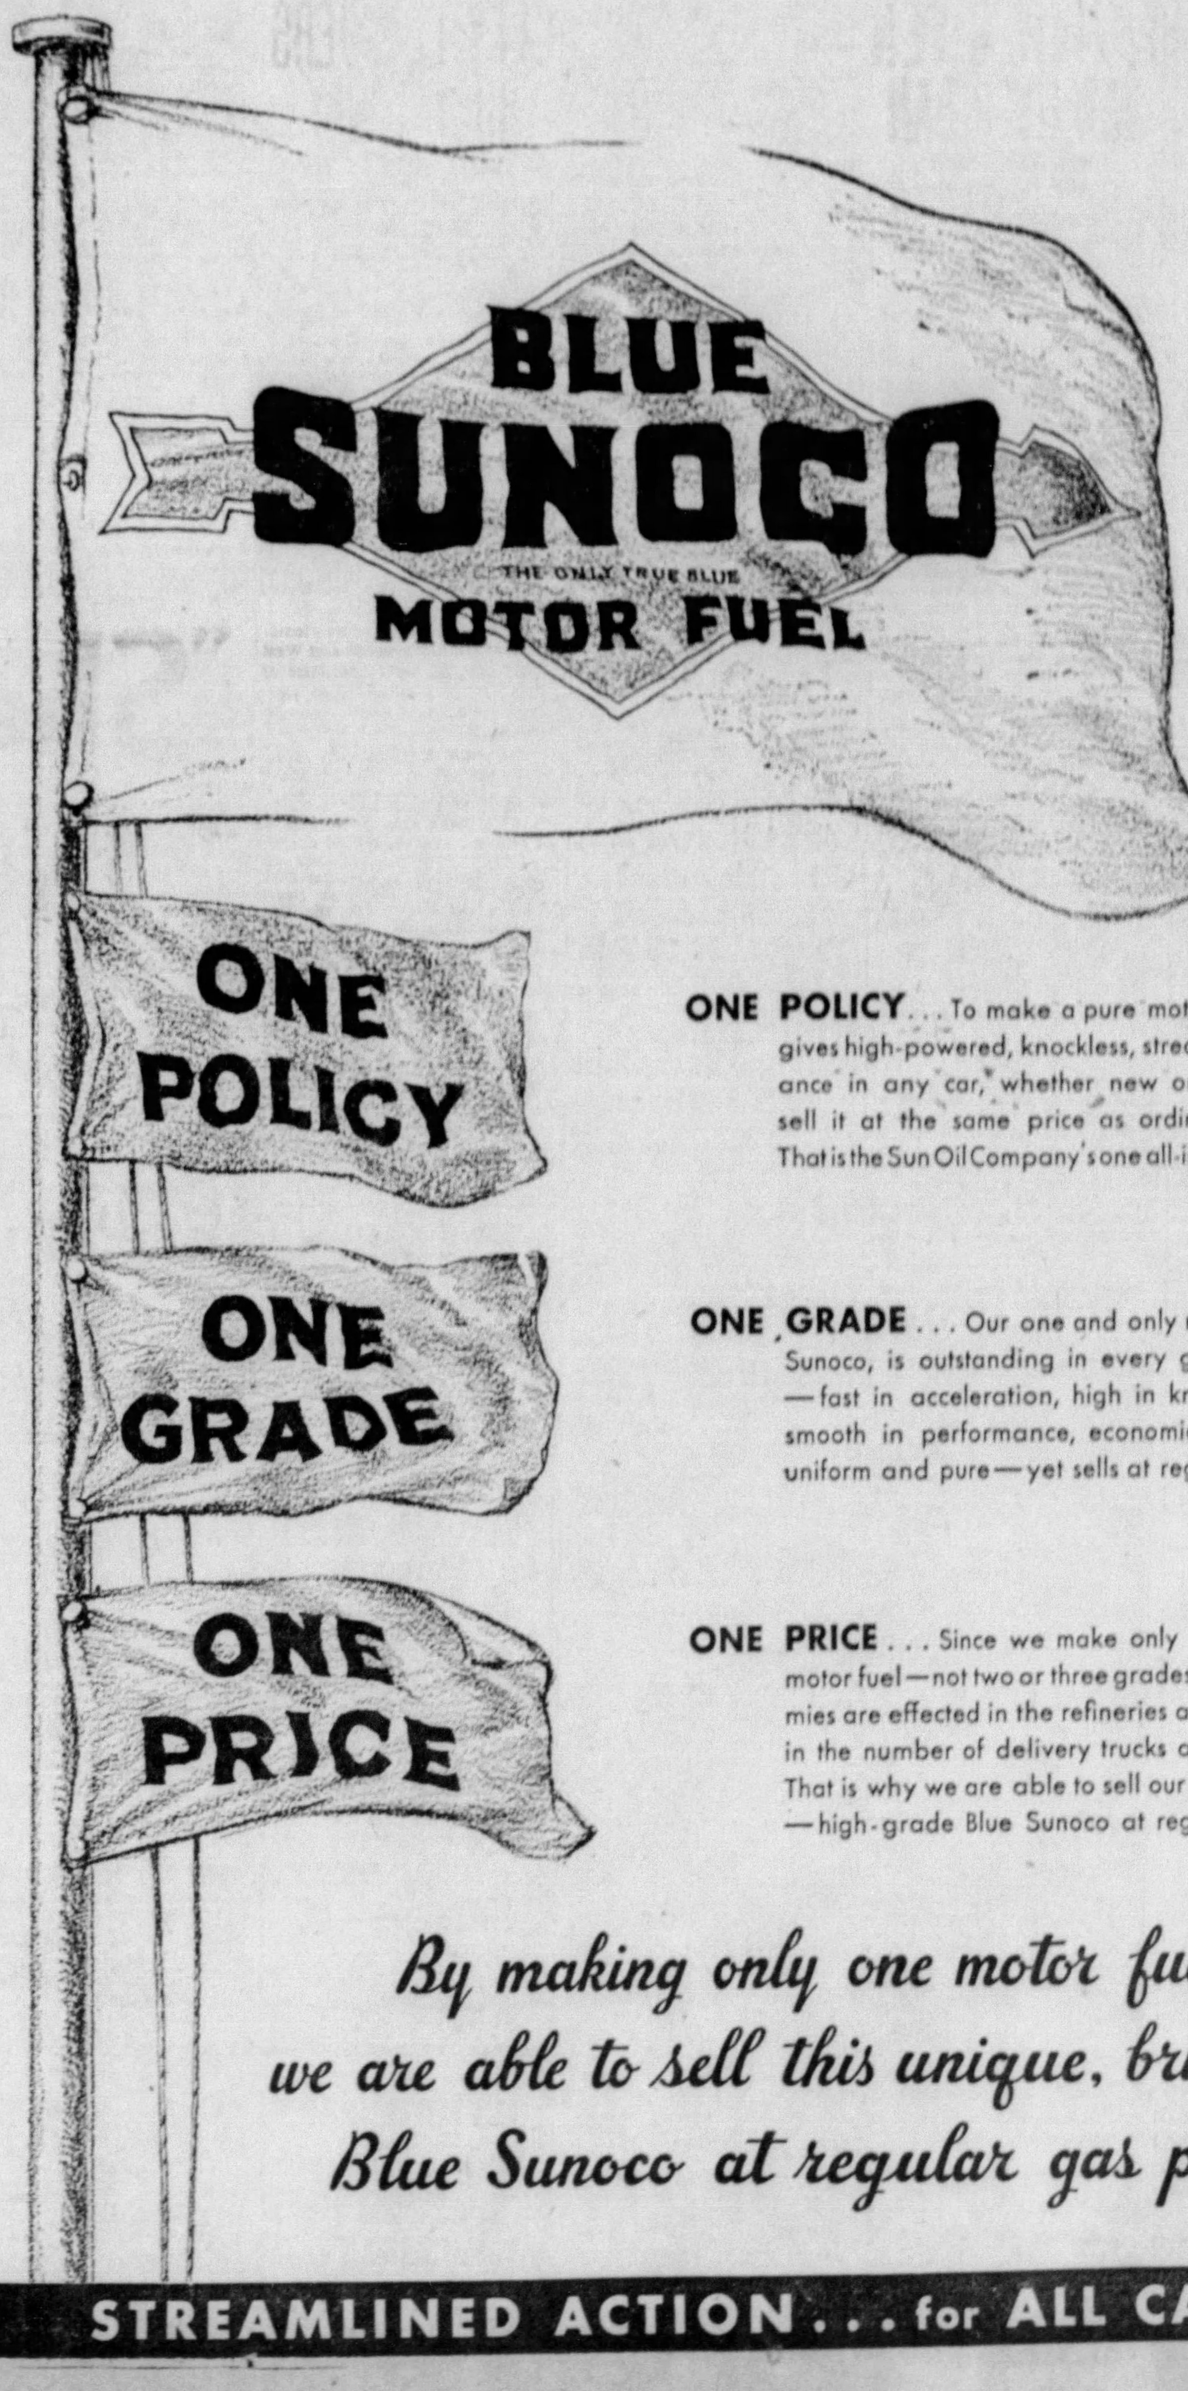
50-to-1 Shot Wins At Charles Town

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., July 3.—(AP.)—A 50-to-1 shot, By Surprise, lived up to its name on the Charles Town track yesterday and paid $109.20 to win the first race. Not a one of the favorites ran in the money.

TWELVE YACHTS IN RACE TO HONOLULU

SAN PEDRO, Cal., July 3.—(AP.)—Twelve trim sailing yachts, ranging in size from a 27-foot sloop to an 84-foot schooner, rolled at anchor in the Los Angeles harbor here today, awaiting the starting gun for their 2,200-mile race to Honolulu.

It was the largest entry since the race was first run in 1908. The skippers and crews who start at noon tomorrow will be shooting at a mark of 11 days, 14 hours and 45 minutes set by The Mariner 11 years ago.



ONE POLICY... To make a pure motor fuel—which gives high-powered, knockless, streamline performance in any car, whether new or old; and still sell it at the same price as ordinary gasolines. That is the Sun Oil Company's one all-important policy.

ONE GRADE... Our one and only motor fuel, Blue Sunoco, is outstanding in every gasoline quality—fast in acceleration, high in knockless power, smooth in performance, economical in mileage, uniform and pure—yet sells at regular gas price.

ONE PRICE... Since we make only one first-grade motor fuel—not two or three grades—great economies are effected in the refineries and warehouses, in the number of delivery trucks and gas pumps. That is why we are able to sell our one—and only—high-grade Blue Sunoco at regular gas price.

By making only one motor fuel we are able to sell this unique, brilliant Blue Sunoco at regular gas price

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now About England

The King is allowed each year by Parliament £110,000 for his private purse, £125,000 for household salaries, £193,000 for household expenses, and £41,200 for charities and little oddments, making a total of almost £470,000 or $2,350,000—this, of course, does not include his private income. (What! No pin money?)

In a divorce suit, only the judge's summing-up is allowed to be published in the newspapers.

No policeman is allowed to carry a gun because "it would encourage criminals to do likewise." (Such a reason!)

You cannot buy a drink in London after midnight except on special occasions. Closing time varies in different localities, notably in Oxford street, where saloons on one side of the street can remain open for half an hour longer than on the opposite side—hence the surge of people crossing the street after 11 p. m. which has puzzled Americans.

The term "gentleman," if used in its strictly correct sense, is only applicable to one who is entitled to a "Coat of Arms."

The old City Guilds still carry on in London as of old and many of them possess beautiful halls filled with art treasures. Among these the "Worshipful Company of Barbers" have hanging in their hall a contemporary picture of William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, by Holbein, standing in a group of city notables. Some time ago an American offered the master barbers a huge sum if they would allow him to cut out Penn's head and take it to America—and they are still talking about it.

All the swans on the River Thames belong to the King and anyone killing or stealing one of them is liable to a fine of five pounds.

The Royal motor cars are always painted red, are especially built for the King, and can be distinguished because they carry no license plates. King George seldom occupies the luxurious back seat and prefers to sit up in one of the little folding seats.

England's most famous library is the Bodleian Library at Oxford. A visitor entering the reading room for the first time was overwhelmed by the vast quantity of books rising in their thousands from the floor to the ceiling all around him, and remarked "I never thought so many books existed," to which came the scornful reply, "Those are only the catalogues."

Ruby Keeler Ill; Powell Switched

By JIMMY STAER

HOLLYWOOD, July 3.—Spinning around with the whirligig of news. What's this? Bill Powell and Jean Harlow romantically leaping! . . . The real reason for the shift of Dick Powell (instead of James Cagney) in "Gentlemen Are Born" is due to Ruby Keeler's illness in New York. The musical numbers in "Flirtation Walk," in which Dick and Ruby star, will be held up until Ruby is completely well and returns here about July 23. In the meantime, Dick steps into the Cagney role and doesn't waste any time, while Bobby Connelly, the dance director, who bids fair to become the top light fantastic guy of the movies, puts the numbers into rehearsal . . . Evidently, Irvin Pichel thought so much of one of his youngsters he named him TWICE. Anyway, a sonny boy is monickered Pichel Pichel.

* * *

Ah, there is still something new under the Hollywood sun—kiddie comedies in color, and a new three-color process at that! Bob McGowan, long associated with the "Our Gang" comedies as director and chief writer, signed with Paramount and Technicolor to produce and megaphone a series of six fun films starring kiddies.

* * *

Wanderings Around Hollywood—Sometimes studios issue strange orders, and this happens to be one of those times—Universal just commanded Roger Pryor to remove his mustache! According to letters from fans, the cash customers don't like the idea and the studio is afraid they'll have a villian instead of a hero on their cinematic shelves . . . Of course, it doesn't mean a thing, but Francis Lederer and Marlene Dietrich have been seeing much of each other! . . . Warner's have signed a deal for all the Earl Stanley Gardner spine-chilling stories, if you scare at all . . . Alice Glazer is in very much of a dither! Autograph-hunters are always mistaking her for Fannie Brice. Alice is to the teeth-gritting stage . . . Jack Kirkland got on the worst end of a brawl the other evening . . . Andy Clyde went to see a mystery show the other night, and was POLENTY scared—he was the only one in the audience!

Tenor to Be Soloist In 'Pop' Concert

The "Pop" concert to be given tonight on the Hotel Schenley lawn by the Little Symphony Orchestra, under Victor Saudek, will have Robert Topping, tenor, as soloist, singing "Through the Forest," by Weber. The orchestral numbers include:

The Stars and Stripes Forever	Sousa
Overture, Orpheus	Offenbach
Turkey in the Straw (concert arrangement)	Guion
Melodies from "The Student Prince"	Romberg
Excerpts from the opera "Lohengrin"	Wagner
By the Beautiful Blue Danube	Strauss
Best of My Heart	Spina
American Fantasy	Herbert

West View Park's Holiday Plans

West View Park ballroom will have Harry Wenzel's music on the Fourth. Paul Thorpe and his Flying Sensation will provide a thrill, and a fireworks show, with plenty of aerial bombs, will take place on the baseball grounds in the evening.

Pool and Bear Cubs Park Features

The swimming pool in Idlewild Park is a most popular feature. Another attraction that has created considerable comment is the zoo of native animals. They include two baby bears, Amos and Andy, who were born in the park on January 15 of this year.

MISSING BRIDE'S 'LOST ECSTASY' CITED

With all arrangements made, why did they fail to sail for London? What happened after the maid had left them in their apartment that stormy December night?

In this concluding chapter of her serial Winifred Van Duzer reconstructs that scene, giving the fiction writer's version of the mystery.

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

(Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.)

CHAPTER V

They listened to the maid, who had come to tidy the apartment, but who goggled at them from the doorway instead, retreat down the hall.

They heard the clock in a nearby tower toll 11, the strokes losing themselves in the howling storm.

Then Agnes leaned forward, grave-eyed, intent.

"Perhaps now, Ivan, you will explain?"

The little man's shrug was indifferent, but a cigaret broke in his hands.

"How often have I already explained! I made no reservations for our sailing. Must I say this again? It was because I wished to travel as a single man!"

"But I am your wife!"

LOST ECSTASY

Disbelief was in her voice and outrage and the shadow of lost ecstasy.

"Ivan—do you love me?"

Such control as lay behind that twitching face snapped short. Agnes saw the too full lips drag in a snarl and the narrow eyes draw to slits. She watched him cross to her side and tower there, a creature not quite human. He growled:

"You are not my wife. And I do not love you, old wagon!"

He told her then what there was to tell.

Before he collapsed in his chair, his fire burned out, she had learned from the snarling lips all there was to know of shame and bitterness and degradation.

DARTINGS OF THE MIND

Her mind went darting this way and that, up one course, down another, seeking a way.

If she were to leave now—vanish in the storm?

Would the man who watched her under the shaded light allow her to leave? Supposing those hands, once so caressing, should move toward her throat?

But she could know soon enough!

If she were to disappear tonight . . . .

Nothing would happen for days—weeks, maybe. But after that . . .

Almost she could see headlines: "Woman Attorney Reported Missing."

Wise in the ways of the law, her thought scurried ahead. She saw Bally coming down from Montreal, finding her way along Center street to the Bureau of Missing Persons . . . .

HEADLINES! HEADLINES!

Ivan would be gone then. He would be with Suzanne in some far city. But that would mean nothing.

There would be other headlines, below them after "London" or "Paris," or "Vienna," the report that police were holding Capt. Lvan Poderjay on suspicion of murder . . . .

Smiling calmly, but with eyes very determined, very cold, Agnes Tufverson got to her feet.

But Poderjay, too, arose, his body swaying a little as he approached her, slowly.

Your Theater And Mine

MURDER IN THE CIRCUS

Murder has reared its ugly head in the circus! In the words of Col. Dexter Fellows "The Big Show is harboring a killer."

The Colonel, who arrived today to put the finishing touches on the work begun by Mr. John Ringling's other press agents, told me, in an awed voice, of a crime committed in the dark of the night as the big circus train traveled from Brooklyn to Boston a few weeks ago.

The slayer, a stealthy fellow, went through a wooden partition to reach his victims, the click-click of the train's wheels on the rails deadening the sounds of his nefarious operations. Three fellow-beings were the victims of his blood-lust, then he returned to his own quarters to take his repose, well satisfied with his night's work.

The killer was an Anoa, or Indian water buffalo, a little fellow called by none other than Frank Buck, "the most deadly creature in the jungle." The objects of his demonical fury as the circus train sped through the night, were three kangaroos, and, as they rate quite high on the hoof, the killings cost Mr. Ringling a pretty penny.

The story of the murders was Col. Fellows' answer to that ancient question: "Is there anything new with the circus?" The Anoa, he said, is the only one ever carried by a big top entourage and was just added to the menagerie this season. The Colonel was emphatic as he declared the killer was on display for everyone to see. That, of course, is the most important part of his narrative.

WHISPERING GALLERY

Ernest Truex, who has the starring role in "Love and Babies," is about to become a father! . . . After attending a private screening of "The Thin Man," Cosmopolitan production now in the Penn, Dashiell Hammett said: "It is the only film version of one of my published stories which thoroughly preserves the mood and characterizations I endeavored to create." . . . And greater praise than that hath no author! . . . That Max Baer booking in the Stanley was originally for July 6 or 13, but it has been set back . . . John Gilbert is giving up romantic roles . . . Offered his choice of a romantic crook part or that of a newspaperman in "The Captain Hates the Sea," the former heart-masher took the reporter characterization. . . . Harry Brown, Jr., son of the Nixon manager, is handling publicity for the Publix circuit in New England . . . For the ladies only—Inez Courtney never uses soap or cold cream on her face . . . She massages it with castor oil! . . . The leemere, an antelope from India, is also among the new things in the circls . . . The censor mix-up on "Dr. Monica" delayed the vacation of S. Tilden Stern, Warner art director, by exactly two weeks.

Second Civic Play To Open July 9

The Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse will present its second play of the summer season, "The Green Bay Tree," by Mordaunt Shairp, next Monday, July 9. It will continue for the week in the Arnold School Theater. It is being staged by Herman Liveright. It has been successfully produced in New York and London. "The Green Bay Tree" is not an adaptation from the novel of the same title.

Baxter Star In Fulton

By KARL KRUG.

While "Stand Up and Cheer" is not by any stretch of the imagination "the great American screen musical," the picture which came to the Fulton yesterday, is more or less acceptable hot weather entertainment.

It has songs, dances and funny sayings; a romance between Warner Baxter and Madge Evans that seems rather hazy, and not enough of little Miss Shirley Temple, who wows 'em during her "Baby Take a Bow" number with Jimmy Dunn.

"Stand Up and Cheer" was produced by Lew Brown for the Fox Film Corporation, and Brown, well known Broadway legitimate impressario, went to Hollywood with an idea that a properly made motion picture would go a long way toward ending the depression.

While we are probably on our way out of the Big Slump, I doubt very much if Mr. Brown's "Stand Up and Cheer" had very much to do with it. The premise of the photoplay is that a Secretary of Amusements in the President's cabinet was what the country needed, so that is the role given to Warner Baxter, who somehow doesn't seem as happy about it as he should.

The acion, which ranges from comedy, farce, satire, melodrama and what-not, is interspersed with several novel musical numbers, with one of the most comical individual bits going to Stepin Fetchit, working with a trained duck, capering to a voice resembling Jimmy Durante's. John Boles and Sylvia Froos warble a romantic lullaby; Mitchell and Durant, impersonating a pair of snoopy Senators, go through their knockabout routine, and Nigel Bruce, fine actor, is excellent as Baxter's assistant.

That old one, "as clean as a hound's tooth," can be applied with perfect propriety to the film in the Fulton. The censors can point at it, and say "there's what we want the motion picture audiences of this country to see," the main difficulty being will the audiences agree with them?

Although the blue noses, big money interests and dignified government luminaries attempt to block Baxter's program, he carries on and the film ends in what I suppose was meant to be a blaze of glory with a Paul Revere-like horseman riding across the sky and workers from all walks of life rushing back to their jobs while whistles toot and bells ring.

Dividend Payments Hopeful

By B. C. FORBES

RECORDS KEPT by this column show that no fewer than 802 companies improved their dividend payments in the first half of this year, contrasted with only 236 one year ago and 217 two years ago.

Mr. Forbes

Unfavorable changes this year have totalled only 120 against 416 in the first half of last year and 1,343 in the first six months of 1932.

These figures are, of course, encouraging.

But don't assume for a moment that the many millions of Americans who have furnished capital to business enterprises are getting reasonable wages on their savings. Normal dividends are not being paid by the great majority of railway companies, industrial corporations, public utilities, real estate enterprises, or even by financial institutions.

The result of this condition, plus the passage of the ultra-severe securities act, is that capital has been virtually on strike. There has not been sufficient inducement for savers to put their money into either new or established concerns.

One newspaper letter-writer comments:

"The investor has been the forgotten man—very much forgotten! Yet it is he who has provided the capital that has put many unemployed back on the payroll. The laborer has been benefited, but the investor who made his investments, often with much sacrifice, to provide for his old age, has seen his stocks depreciate and his dividends dwindle to almost nothing."

The following table, giving month-to-month comparisons of improved dividend declarations since 1930, shows the progress made during the last 12 months:

January ..	207	30	69	117
February ..	111	42	31	70
March	148	29	43	80
April	105	21	24	38
May	97	39	20	46
June	134	75	30	58
Totals for 6 mos.	802	236	217	399
July	...	41	31	47
August	...	70	22	31
September	103	32	55
October	58	27	41
November	102	44	42
December	159	85	90
Totals ..	802	769	440	715

The grand total of more cheerful payments made during the last six months by industrial, utility and railway companies was composed thus:

	Ind.	P.U.	R.R.
Extra	205	8	4
Increased	171	6	3
Resumed	170	16	2
Back	156	7	1
Initial	40	1	0

THIS SUGGESTION comes from a college-bred business employe:

"We see many professors running the government and trying to run the business of the country. I wonder how many business men are running colleges and are in the lecture rooms of colleges giving the students the real low-down on what they may expect in business?"

One hears that brain trusters no longer occupy the inner seats of the mighty at Washington, and that President Roosevelt is relying less and less upon their theories and amateurish recommendations. He is discovering that practical experience is of some value in handling practical problems.

There are very few able business men teaching in our business colleges. This is one reason why so much complaint is heard about the modern product of these institutions. What many youthful diploma-owners don't know about the very rudiments of economics, of earning a living, is amazing and appalling.

Graduates unquestionably would be better fitted to enter and battle the world were they brought into contact, at least in their final year, with men of affairs capable of imparting some of their knowledge in attractive fashion. Book-learning does not constitute all of life.

JUDGE SENDS 'PAL' TO PRISON

WHEELING, W. Va., July 3.—(AP.)—Years ago John Ritz and Howard Kimberly were "pals"—fellow-workers who toiled together in the glare of the red-hot metal in the big steel mills.

They met in court yesterday. Ritz, now a judge, sat on the bench, facing his old friend, Kimberly, a prisoner.

Graying and showing the wear of his 76 years, Kimberly heard himself sentenced to life imprisonment for killing a man.

His friend, the Judge, said:

"We have been good friends for 40 years and it is painful for me to pass this sentence, but courts must do what the law requires."

Kimberly was convicted of beating Clement Davis, 44, to death, in a fight March 24 in the basement of the City Building over a 10-cent light bulb.

Execution of sentence was deferred for 60 days to permit Kimberly to appeal to the Circuit Court.

TRADE PERILS REVEALED BY GERMANY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The German disorders serve to emphasize anew the highly speculative character of an economy built up on extensive dependence on international trade.

Mr. Rukeyser

Herr Adolf Hitler recently attempted to make a threat against the import of American goods if the boycott against Germany continued. But this was an empty threat, as since the war Germany has paid for an excess of goods in worthless marks, defaulted long-term bonds and short-term credits frozen by the standstill agreement.

With the outside world in ferment, the wisdom of a trend toward economic nationalism—at least for the short term—is emphasized. George N. Peek's report on bookkeeping helps to clarify the situation. In the past, the United States was always overwhelmingly interested in the home market, but the situation was confused by loose talk about internationalism. As a matter of fact, even during the peak years, 1927-1929, we derived only 6 per cent of our national income from exports, whereas most important foreign nations depended on exports for 20 per cent to 65 per cent of their national income.

CREDIT IS WASTED

For reasons of immediate convenience, repudiation is in the air, and politicians, in order to save their posts, make long-term sacrifices in order to avoid immediate cash payments.

From the historical viewpoint, such conduct is as intelligent as swearing at your banker when a note is due, instead of meeting it or courteously asking for an extension.

Financiers believe that the effort of Secretary Morgenthau to shut off the opportunity for Americans to make substantial speculative profits out of the manipulated rise in silver will merely transfer the chance to British and Chinese speculators, who are outside the jurisdiction of the United States for tax purposes. In other words, if as a result of the new policy there should be an appreciation of silver, nothing we can do will stop foreign speculators from getting on the band wagon. To the extent that American operators benefit, the government will at least be a partner in the gains through the regular income tax and through the 50 per cent impost on silver profits.

STATE SOCIALISM

The extent to which we in the United States have turned to state socialism at least temporarily is illustrated by the statistics of new financing for June. As a matter of fact, new issues last month were the largest for any month in three years, reaching $268,748,000. The largest issue was a Federal Land Bank refunding operation. The bulk of the remainder was public or quasi public finance. Private initiative scarcely came to the capital market. No industrial, public utility, or railroad bonds were offered for sale during the month.

In fact, for 11 months while the Federal Securities Act has been in effect there has been a void of long term business financing. Except for a small railroad issue in April and small issues of public utility bonds in March and May, private industries have in effect been shut off from the reservoir to new capital.

CAPITAL GLUT WORLD WIDE PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, July 3.—(AP.)—Experts of the department of commerce have found that the phenomenon of extreme bank liquidity extends throughout the world as well as in the United States.

In each country attempts have been made to explain the situation on the basis of a shut-down of purely domestic loans, but the experts are wondering if a general cause may not be found in the stagnation of international trade.

CHANNELS CLOGGED

Other times there has always been a considerable capital flow among nations resulting from international lending of surpluses built up in various countries. Such lending is now at a virtual standstill.

The experts look upon the recent reciprocal tariff legislation as offering a possible opportunity to start again this world flow of funds.

While the experts are not certain of the effect on other conditions they suspect that trade stoppage is the key-log in a world credit jam, which, if freed, would bring greater domestic recovery in its train.

LIQUIDITY PREVAILS

A special report on the world situation shows unusual financial liquidity in almost every principal nation, "as if banks were intended to be mere warehouses for currency," the report says. It cites examples of bankers' efforts to increase liquidity.

In country after country, banks have turned increasingly to government bonds, successfully refinancing high interest short bonds into long term low interest bonds, with heavy oversubscriptions.

Low interest rates prevail otherwise but do not seem to stimulate domestic recovery in many of these countries. It may be, the experts believe, that world financing is necessary first.

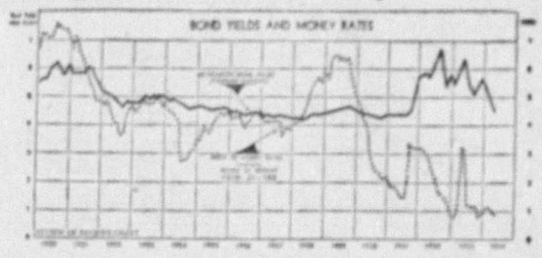
Domestic Bond Yield Ignores Money Rates



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews.

The chart shows the course of bond yields and money rates from 1926 down through the first five months of 1934. It may be noted that the relation of yields and rates during the period of the depression is exactly contrary to that evident in the period after the war. At that time, the rise in money rates was accompanied by a rise in bond yields, which of course is the logical relation.

During the past four years, however, money rates have been hovering at all-time low levels, whereas bond yields likewise have been skirting the ceiling of previous experience.

The explanation is not difficult to find. Money rates are calculated from an average of call money, bankers' acceptances, prime commercial paper, and time rates. These represent the choicest of short-time open market rates, and are hardly comparable with the yields of the 60 domestic bonds compiled by Standard Statistics.

The former represent the best risks and cover but a short period, whereas the latter, that is to say, the bond yields, represent risks which are less attractive in a period of depression and extend over the life of the bonds. The subject is of considerable interest at the present time because of the prospects for new financing in the immediate future. Judging from all the signs, and barring further inflationary experiments by the administration, the country is running into a period of continued low returns on capital.

This is due to a number of factors. In the first place, the country has reached a stage of economic maturity where capital continues to accumulate even in a period of depression. With recovery under way, it is likely that this rate of accumulation will accelerate. In the second place, there is no immediate outlet for investment funds comparable to that offered by the railroads in the latter part of the Nineteenth Century, or the automobile industry during the period from 1910 to 1925.

Furthermore, the Federal Securities Act, the Banking Act of 1933, and the Stock Exchange Control Bill all tend to check over-enthusiastic distribution efforts and to discourage unduly speculative ventures. Finally, we have the closing of foreign outlets for capital funds.

In view of all this, the markets are faced with an impending plethora of funds available at very low rates which will seek investment. It is the view of careful students of the money market that we are running into a period where first-class securities are due to sell at a substantial premium and second grades at par or a slight premium.

Dry Goods Leaders Note Improvement

CHICAGO, July 3.—(AP.)—Members of the national dry goods trade, opening a two-day session, were told that business is definitely improved. They met to

STOCKS MOVE IN NARROW RANGE

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—The heat, the humidity, the Fourth of July holiday and various other restraining influences combined today to hold the stock market in a narrow and extremely dull trading range.

The majority of speculators who might have been active gave the board rooms a wide berth and floor members accounted for the greater part of the scattered dealings. A few issues showed firming tendencies, but the list, as a whole, was in a slumberous mood.

Sentiment showed some improvement when wheat rallied a cent or more a bushel. Corn and oats, however, were hesitant. Cotton got back some of its yesterday's losses and rubber futures rallied. Silver lagged. Bonds were a trifle better in spots. The dollar was a shade lower in terms of European gold currencies.

As market motivators, the new exchange control commission, federal regulation, the drop in steel prices and production, the railroad pension law, the farm mortgage moratorium measure and the German political situation appeared to have dwindled in immediate importance. The financial sector began to cast about for "something new" which might arouse the market from its lethargy.

The more bullishly inclined commentators pointed out that, considering the somewhat unfavorable news influences lately, stocks have performed entirely satisfactorily. While dullness has been the rule, with potential buyers reluctant to add to holdings, the absence of any major selling urge was seen as a highly encouraging factor.

In some brokerage quarters it was felt that the most important deterrent to any prolonged period of liquidation at this time, either of equities or commodities, rests in the administration's inflationary powers.

Most trade observers estimate a further recession in business indices this month, but the belief is expressed that the lost ground will be regained in the late summer and early fall. Curtailment of factory and mill operations was said to have come a bit later this year than usual, and, consequently, fall improvement may be a little later than the normal schedule.

HOLIDAY CUTS STEEL RATE

NEW YORK, July 3.—(AP.)—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimates steel production for the current week at 23 per cent of capacity, compared with 44.7 per cent a week ago. Two weeks ago the rate was 56.1 per cent and a month ago it was 57.4 per cent.

This decrease of 21.7 points, or 48½ per cent in production, follows the 11.4 point, or 20.3 per cent decrease for the previous week, and was by far the largest reported by the Institute since the organization started publishing the weekly estimates last October.

The sharp drop was partially accounted for by the fact that all the steel companies will be shut down completely tomorrow and further to the sharp curtailment in steel buying for early fall delivery which has been noticeable for a week or more.

Buying for advance needs against the possibility of a strike in the industry helped production along considerably two weeks ago.

WHEAT SCORES UPTURN

CHICAGO, July 3. — Wheat scored early advances in price today, recovering somewhat from yesterday's sharp decline. Upturns were attributed to moderate buying based on evidence of the shortest crop of all grains in 30 years.

Opening unchanged to ¾ higher, September new 88½@88¾, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ off, and subsequently showed a general advance.

BUSINESS DROP MORE THAN SEASONAL

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, July 3.—There is not much new to say about the immediate business trend. The activity in leading industries is declining more than seasonally, as indicated by sharp slumps in steel and lumber production and sales. Retail trade is very dull, and if we omit liquor sales, probably not as large in dollar volume as a year ago. This means a good deal lower quantity of goods sold.

The volume of bank checks drawn, despite a 15 per cent higher level of wholesale prices, now runs below last year. Bank loans have been declining and are also under a year ago.

This condition is immediately due in part to overproduction in the spring, stimulated by government spending, by price boosts under certain codes, and by anticipated results of devaluing the dollar. Then came consumer resistance to high prices, strikes, and the drought.

Private debts, and the burden of carrying overvalued property and securities, also continue to be a drag on buying and selling.

Finally, the general uncertainty as to New Deal policies, both in controlling business and in monetary matters, is very disturbing, and tends to retard business all along the line.

These conditions are likely to continue to retard, the chief reliance of the New Dealers being (1) renewed government spending, and (2) inflation. These are separate factors, but they are apt to work together. The general feeling now is that as business recedes and the fall elections draw near, the administration will step up its spending program and at the same time "step on the gas" of inflation.

DRASTIC ACTION

Probably they will have to do this quite drastically to get the immediate results they want. This is true, both because their radical new legislation and contemplated "reforms" tend to depress, and because the appeal of "anticipated inflation" is now not so effective as it was.

For example, business is now only 3 or 4 per cent above a year ago, and is considerably under the peak of last summer. I think that if you leave out the effects of drought and monopoly under the codes, you will not find much strength in prices during the last three months.

As we look back at the half year just ended, we find a moderate spurt went on in business between last November and the end of April. It seems fair to say that this was chiefly due to government spending, first for the CWA and then for farm bonuses. Large loans through RFC and other agencies also contributed. A second factor was the devaluation of the dollar and the decline in our foreign exchange rate, which caused a temporary spurt in exports.

Then, too, the liquor business was added.

The increased wage expenses under various codes and the price markups which attended them, had the effect of "driving in" much buying.

Unquestionably, the two outstanding "moves" during the first half were in (1) steel and automobile production, and (2) bank deposits. Both trace directly to government spending (except that code price-markups and strike fears helped the former.)

GOVERNMENT HELPED

You see, as the administration ladled out our money, the checks went to buy stream lined cars, while the borrowing made necessary on the Treasury's part piled up artificial credits in the banks. The latter largely constituted "excess reserves," which have recently been of record proportions.

But the banks have been unable to find sound borrowers, as is shown by the declining trend of bank loans, so the excess credit thus "created" remains unused. And when the government reduces its spending, the so-called "business activity" recedes.

We may say that the first half of 1934 was a great "pump priming" experiment (gamble). The New Dealers poured into the business pump (1) our government's credit and (2) the artificial "profit" that they wrote up on the gold hoard which they had seized. The chief lasting result is public debt.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

'Brain Trusters' Looking Over 'Frosh Team'

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Mr. Roosevelt did as neat a job of getting out of the NRA building code as Houdini used to do with a strait-jacket.

That is the whole story behind the recent executive order authorizing contractors to bid 15 per cent less than the code price on government and private contracts.

The truth is that the code had skyrocketed building prices up to the 1929 price stratosphere and had ruined whatever chance the building industry had to get back on its feet this spring. Labor costs were upped way out of sight and some materials jumped as much as 300 per cent. That certainly did not encourage people to build.

The result was that, in May and June, the building industry was on a 25 per cent basis. That is its business was one-fourth of what it was in the same period of the years 1923, 2924 and 1925.

And most of that 25 per cent business it was doing was PWA fostered.

No other industry has gone down lower and stayed down longer in this depression.

SCIEME

The President could not very well ditch the code or change its price struggle. The industry would protest and anyway such a step would be an open retreat for the NRA.

So they fixed up an executive order. The excuse given for it was that the contractors were submitting identical bids to the government on various projects.

The tip on the inadequacy of that excuse is the fact that the order provides that, when a contractor bids down to 15 per cent below the code price on government projects, that price scale immediately becomes effective to all the consuming public.

Every insider knows the only ultimate result will be to lower building costs generally by 15 per cent.

It will give a much needed encouragement to private building.

RAH, RAH, RAH

One of the few remaining Brain Trusters looked over that list of 14 college professors summoned by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau the other day, and observed:

"I see they have called in the freshman team."

That designation will stick. The Morgenthau "Brain Trusters" will always hereafter be known in the inner circle as the freshman team. That is because only one of them has a rank above that of instructor. The varsity brain trusters brought in by Mr. Roosevelt were generally recognized leaders in particular fields of instruction and held high college jobs.

PURPOSE

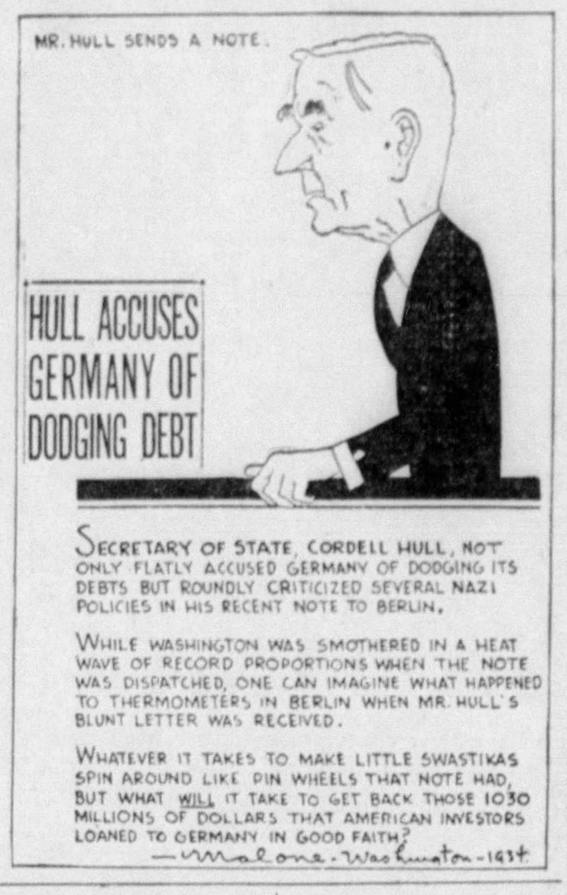
The freshman team will spend the summer looking into corners of the Treasury where cobwebs have spread unmolested for years. It will also look under logs for worms and may find some.

As a result, it may have some minor effect on the reformation of the taxation system promised for some time within the next few years.

Otherwise it will be no more than a summer outing for the boys with the ferules.

EXIT

While these ferules are coming in, others have been going out virtually unnoticed.



MR. HULL SENDS A NOTE.
HULL ACCUSES GERMANY OF DODGING DEBT
SECRETARY OF STATE, CORDELL HULL, NOT ONLY FLATLY ACCUSED GERMANY OF DODGING ITS DEBTS BUT ROUNDLY CRITICIZED SEVERAL NAZI POLICIES IN HIS RECENT NOTE TO BERLIN.
WHILE WASHINGTON WAS SMOTHERED IN A HEAT WAVE OF RECORD PROPORTIONS WHEN THE NOTE WAS DISPATCHED, ONE CAN IMAGINE WHAT HAPPENED TO THERMOMETERS IN BERLIN WHEN MR. HULL'S BLUNT LETTER WAS RECEIVED.
WHATEVER IT TAKES TO MAKE LITTLE SWASTIKAS SPIN AROUND LIKE PIN WHEELS THAT NOTE HAD, BUT WHAT WILL IT TAKE TO GET BACK THOSE 1030 MILLIONS OF DOLLARS THAT AMERICAN INVESTORS LOANED TO GERMANY IN GOOD FAITH?

Roosevelt 'Pulled' Houdini On One Code

The first was Grace Abbott, of the Children's Bureau, who went to the University of Chicago. It is understood there was not room enough for both Miss Perkins and Miss Abbott in the Labor Department. It is such a small building.

Another departure back to college is that of Irwin Griswold, justice department advocate, who will teach law at Harvard. A third is another justice lawyer, Charles Bunn, who will teach at the university of Wisconsin law school.

None of these was either a brain truster or a new dealer.

SPEECH

The inner reaction to Mr. Roosevelt's radio speech was not as enthusiastic as had been expected.

Lots of telegrams and letters poured into the White House, but they did not carry the same eager tone which greeted his earlier radio talks. One reason was that the speech had nothing exciting in it.

It was intended to be an assurance to business against socialism and radicalism, while at the same time insisting on further social reform. Also, it was meant to be an explanation to the country for the President's unusual summer trip.

The idea now is to shut down on government activity as much as possible for at least a month in hopes that existing criticism and discontent will waste themselves away.

SLOGAN

"Are you better off today than you were a year ago?"

Mr. Roosevelt gave it to his followers in his radio speech. His political associates believe it will be very effective with large classes of people, and are planning to make the most of it.

No political campaigners of this modern era can touch the Roosevelt technique when it comes to making slogans.

W. HOMESTEAD PAY IGNORED

West Homestead Council last night, after a stormy session in which they had been told they should resign, reinstated two policemen who had been dismissed by Burgess Richard H. Lawry, named a new borough treasurer, and forgot to make provision for borough employes who have received no pay since the first of the year.

The meeting was enlivened when Dr. John Sullivan and others denounced Council for the manner in which borough affairs are handled. Dr. Sullivan concluded with:

"You all ought to resign."

The police committee reinstated Desk Sergt. Robert Morrow and Patrolman Joseph Lichtenstein, dismissed last Tuesday by Burgess Lawry.

George F. Lloyd, borough treasurer, resigned because, he said, under the terms of the National Recovery Act, he cannot continue as an officer in the Monongahela Trust Company and hold the borough treasurer's job. Council named W. C. McClure to succeed him.

INSULL FLAYS SUIT BY U. S.

CHICAGO, July 3.—(AP.)—The government was charged today with "using a shotgun" to fight Samuel Insull.

Counsel for the deposed utilities magnate, under indictment for using the mails to defraud, asserted yesterday that from the broad nature of the government's charge, Insull might be accused of anything from a shell game or a Sunday school prank.

The plea was raised by Attorney Floyd E. Thompson in arguments for a bill of particulars, after Insull, apparently in better health and spirits than at any other time since his return from Turkey, pleaded innocence to the mail fraud charge. The court said a decision would be reached Monday.

Thompson referred to the "shotgun" clause in the indictment as a general catch-all under which the government might seek to prove anything not elsewhere alleged.

Fireworks Craze German War Vet, Kills Self

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., July 3.—(INS.)—A man who survived the bursting shells, poison gas and machine-gun fire of the World War, shot and killed himself here today because he could not stand firecrackers.

He was Fred Gundlach, 34, father of three children.

Since last February he had been ill and obsessed by a conviction that his neighbors were trying to kill him because he had served with the German army during the war, his wife said.

During the last several days the conviction that he was a marked man was strengthened by continual popping of fireworks near his home. Newspaper reports of the shooting of Nazi revolutionary leaders in Germany added to his nervousness, his wife said.

U. S. DROPS 225 LIQUOR CASES

Ninety indictments charging violations of the former national prohibition law, naming 225 men and women as defendants, have been nolle prossed in Federal Court during the last week, on motions by United States Attorney H. S. Dumbauld.

These cases were dropped by the District Attorney, on authority of Washington, due to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. All liquor violations are now being prosecuted in the Federal Court under the internal revenue act.

Archie Negleman, of Belle Vernon, a former federal prohibition agent, whose liquor conspiracy case was nolle prossed last week, yesterday was arraigned before the United States commissioner on a charge of violating the internal revenue act, at Regan, Westmoreland County, on June 9.

The commissioner reserved his decision pending further hearing. A decision is also pending on a charge against him of violating the revenue act at North Charleroi. In each case he was charged with operating an unlicensed still and concealing whisky which was untax paid.

ONE ARRESTED IN HILL RAID

M. Labovita, of 2306 Eldridge street, was to post bond today following a raid on a bottle supplies store at 11 Crawford street, in the Hill district, believed by liquor agents to be the headquarters of a bootleg liquor ring.

The raid was made late yesterday on the O. K. Bottles Supplies Company by five agents under the direction of Estey Jimcousky, district enforcement supervisor of the State Liquor Control Board.

More than 25 cases of bottles already labeled with alleged counterfeit stickers were found in a ramshackle building in the rear of the store. Jimcousky said more than a score of persons are believed to be connected with the "ring" and used the store as headquarters for over a decade.

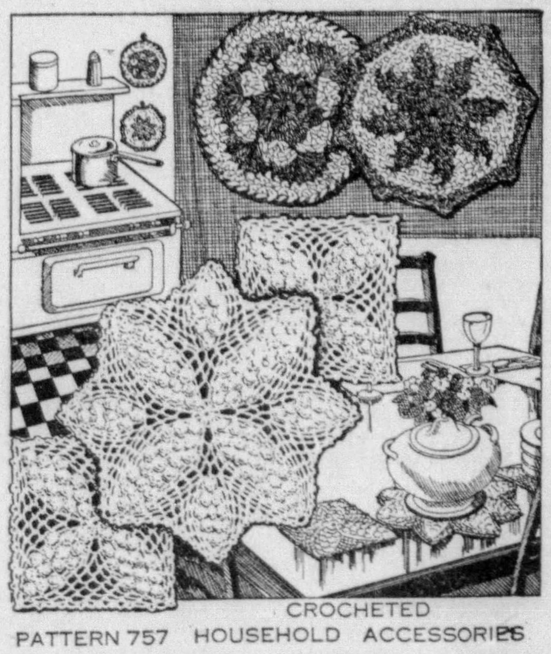
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



CROCHETED
PATTERN 757 HOUSEHOLD ACCESSORIES

Crochet steps to the fore and offers an attractive and practical solution, for the handling of hot dishes on the table and of hot pots and pans in the kitchen. The crochet potholders are made of the heaviest crochet cotton (the same as candlewicking). They are done in white and a color or two colors and so offer the chance to get another gay color accent in your kitchen. Needless to say, the heavy cotton makes it possible to do them in a jiffy. The hot plate mats (the large one measures 11 inches, the smaller one 6 inches) are in a popcorn design—nice, fat popcorns that protect the table and still makes a lovely design. The mats are made using a double thread—that's why they're so nice and thick! The string so commonly seen now in crochet is used. But even if they are an ample protection to the table, they still have sufficient openwork to set off the design.

Pattern 757 comes to you with complete directions for making the articles shown; illustrations of all stitches used; and material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth eighth, New York, N. Y.

Girl in the Family

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXVI.

Susan was filled with apology to the bottom of her soul, and she had a feeling that she ought to tell Wallace how she felt. But it seemed too enormous a wrong to apologize for—telling a man that you were about to break your engagement to him just when it had been publicly announced. Especially when the man had been jilted once before, as Lutie said Wallace had been jilted by Eleanor Kendall.

"I don't know what to say to you, Wallace," she mourned. "I feel as if I ought to get down on my knees to you and ask you to forgive me—"

"Oh, DRIVEL!" Wallace all but shouted in the crowded street. "All this is drivel! You're engaged to me. You're going to go on being engaged to me!" He had lost all of his poise, his calmness. He went along beside her, his lips moving but making no sound as if he were saying things to himself that were best left unspoken.

They were nearing the icy stone steps that led up into the lobby of the St. Vincent Hotel. As they reached them he took Susan by the arm and steered her into it and across the lobby to the dining room where she and Allen had tea a few days before.

"I suppose I'm a little stunned by what you've just told me, Susan," Wallace said when they were seated at a sunny table and he was busy with his fork, "and perhaps I'm not thinking in a straight line, but this doesn't seem to end anything between us. You've cared for me for almost two years, and you still do. You must. Two weeks ago you did."

Wants to Know Rival

He broke off at that point and did some hard thinking, his brow knotted, while he spread butter on the end of a roll. "Who is it, by the way, that you've fallen for?"

Susan shook her head. "It doesn't make any difference who it is, does it?" she asked. "I'd tell you if it would do any good, but it wouldn't. You couldn't do a thing about it. I can't myself."

"You can't what?"

"Can't help caring about somebody that isn't you."

"You can tell me who it is," he said, returning in his stubborn way to his questioning of her. "That's what I want to know."

Suddenly his fork went down upon his plate with a clatter, and he crumpled his napkin down upon the table cloth. "Good lord, I've arranged to buy that house, too!" he exclaimed. "It's too late now for you to act like a litle fool, Susan!—I've bought the house."

"I told you not to," said Susan. "I'm not going to live in a house that I won't like, with a man that I don't like—that I don't love, Wallace. I do like you."

Something in her heart said: "You must get this over to him now. You must break away from him. Don't weaken. Tell him you're through, and make it stick."

She sat silent, unable to say the unpleasant final things that would have ended everything, whole nature shrinking from the idea of hurting Wallace any more than she had already hurt him.

Not Going to Give Up

The waiter came up for the rest of the lunch order and Wallace pushed the menu aside as soon as the man laid it before him. "Bring anything. The dollar lunch will do," he said impatiently. By that small sign Susan knew just how disturbed he was, for Wallace always gave a great deal of time and care to the ordering of his meals.

"Now, then, you like me, but you don't love me. You love somebody else. Is that it?" he asked when the waiter had left them.

"That's it," said Susan.

"But that's not all of it. I've bought a house for you," Wallace reminded her, "and your family has announced the engagement. In the newspapers, mind you, in the newspapers. And you expect me to let people laugh at me and pity me because you've taken it into your head that you don't care for me any more.

"Well, Susan, I'm not going to let you do this thing to me. I'm just conceited enough to think that you still like me a great deal, and that if I hang on you'll realize it sooner or later. So I'm going to hang on. I'm not going to give you up for an instant."

His own words seemed to buoy him up. When his lunch came he ate it as if he enjoyed it—breast of chicken and beef salad and raspberry water ice. And as he ate he became more and more cheerful.

"I've stayed away from you too long," he decided, "or else you've heard some gossip or other about me, and it's made you jealous. Is that it?"

"No." Susan shook her head. "I did hear some gossip about you and Eleanor Kendall, but it didn't make me jealous."

She took the Ludlow and Ludlow box, with the ring in it, from her lap and laid it on the tablecloth with the watch bracelet beside it.

"I want to give these back to you, Wallace." She shoved them across the table to him with the tip of one finger.

Tells About Eleanor

Wallace picked up the ring box. He held it out to her so that she could see the words "Ludlow and Ludlow" engraved across the cover.

"I suppose you wondered about this box," he said. "I ought to have told you about it—about the ring—the night I gave it to you."

Susan nodded.

"Well, I'll tell you now how I happened to have it," he said lifting his chain with an air of determined frankness. "I bought the ring for another girl—for Eleanor Kendall, as a matter of fact—a long time ago when we were engaged. She kept it for a couple of weeks and then she sent it back to me. Broke the engagement."

He stopped long enough to pat his mouth with his napkin. "Who told you about Eleanor and me?" he asked. "You were just a young kid when I was going around with her."

"Lutie told me."

"I see." He leaned toward her and his eyes narrowed once more. "And that's really why you're trying to break our engagement, isn't it? You're sore because I gave you her ring, aren't you?"

He laughed with immense relief as if he had solved the whole thing in his own mind. "You are jealous, aren't you?—But, gosh, Susan, what did you expect me to do? Throw away a thousand dollars' worth of jewelry just because a girl had had it in her possession for a few days a long time ago?"

He broke the little cardboard box with his fingers and held out the ring. "Let me take your hand, Honey, and put this back where it belongs," he said, his own masterful self once more.

Susan put her hands in her lap, folding them together. "No, I don't want it."

His shoulders went up in a shrug of pure exasperation. "Well, then, we'll go down to Sigler's and trade it in on a new ring. Will that suit you?"

"Wallace, I don't want any ring," Susan said emphatically.

He lost his temper then. "Well, ring or no ring, you're not going to make a fool of me! I let one girl do a stunt like this to me, but I'll be darned if I'm going to let two of you get away with it!" He helped Susan into her coat as if he were closing the Iron Maiden around her and went stalking out of the dining room ahead of her.

Wallace Apologizes

Out in the street he seemed to recover himself a little. "I'm sorry I was rude, Susan," he apologized, beckoning for a taxicab, "but this simply knocks me off my rails. It wouldn't be so bad if it were the first time perhaps—but people will wonder what's the matter with me if you throw me down. They'll say there must be some good reason why I can't keep any girl in love with me. . . . I couldn't stand it, Susan. The talk. The gossip."

It was on the tip of Susan's tongue to ask him how she was to stand the talk, the gossip, when people found out—as they would find out — that she was wearing Eleanor Kendall's ring. But she said nothing and climbed into the taxicab.

He paid the driver in advance for the trip to Center street and tipped him. "I'll be out to see you soon and we'll settle all this," he said through the frosted window of the door after he had slammed it. She had a last glimpse of his face, anxious-eyed and rather drawn, as the cab left the curb.

John was standing in the hall of the house when she walked in at 2 o'clock. It was the time of after-luncheon naps and the house was silent except for the ticking of the white marble clock.

"Where you been for the last two hours?" he asked as she pushed open the vestibule door. "I called here three times trying to reach you. Connie and I were married an hour ago." It was like John to toss an important fact to her in just that offhand way.

He grinned at her, his nostrils dilating as if he were full of some kind of strong excitement. "We're leaving for Omaha tonight, she and I," he said.

"Tonight?" She shook her head and her voice trembled on the word. All week long the knowledge that John was going away very soon had clouded the back of her mind. It had been there behind all her thoughts of Allen, her happiness. "Why, I thought it wasn't settled, John. And I thought that even if you did go, it wouldn't be until next Sunday—" She burst into tears.

After all, no one would ever know her and care for her as John knew her. They had grown up together in this old house full of middle-aged people, and they had always clung to each other for the comfort and understanding that no one else could give them—and now he was going away. Susan sat down on the floor and sobbed, her heart bursting with the first real sorrow she had ever known since her mother's death, which had occurred so long ago that it was like something that had happened to someone else whenever she thought of it now.

She felt John's hand on her shoulder. "Come on, Susie, cheer up," he was saying. "This is a chance in a thousand for me, and you've got to be tickled to pieces about it—and you can come out to visit us as soon as we get settled. Buck up and help me get my clothes packed, will you?"

Susan followed him up the stairs and began to sort his neckties while he ran up into the attic for his trunk. A long time ago, in this very room, he had written his first sports article, an account of a basketball game for his high school paper. She remembered how he had told her then that when he grew up he was going to write for newspapers and how he had kept on saying it to the family, year after year, while they tried to keep him at the study of law, setting his young will against theirs.

"If you want to do a thing badly enough, you'll do it," he had always said to Susan when she complained to him that her father wouldn't let her take a business course or have a year or two at college. "If they won't give you the money get a job and earn some for yourself. I'll help you out, too. The trouble with you is that you give in to people too easily. You let them run you."

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Tomorrow is the Fourth of July, fellows!

We have heard many firecrackers going off already, and it's easy to tell that everybody isn't waiting until the Fourth of July to start shooting.

In a way, that's not so good. We remember when we were kids ourselves we liked to hold everything until the right day. It was more fun, somehow. The Fourth of July is tomorrow, and we hope any Junior Patrol members who are going to shoot fireworks will wait until tomorrow before they begin.

And we want to remind you again, too, fellows, that fireworks are dangerous. Every year, there are some boys and girls who are injured, some of them seriously, and badly burned by fireworks.

We read not long ago that a girl had been hurt already by having a firecracker explode near her. Some boys threw it at her. Never, never, throw a firecracker at anybody, fellows.

Fireworks at night are just about the most fun. The rockets flame up into the sky, leaving a trail of bright sparks. The roman candles send up balls of colored fire. The aerial bombs burst into beautiful flowers of red and blue and yellow sparks.

And the best displays of all are the kind that an organization holds. Then a professional sets off the fireworks. It's more fun to watch a pretty display.

If a bunch of the fellows in your neighborhood are all having fireworks, though, why not have a fireworks party? You could put all your firecrackers together, and your other things and set them off so that every member of your Junior Patrol could enjoy them. In that way, they'll last longer and everybody will have more fun.

We would like to get picture postcards and letters from Junior Patrol members on vacation. Tell us what you are doing, and what is the most interesting thing you saw.

Baptism by Fire

Daily Short Short-Story

By HJALMAR LINDQUIST

Just as the train, snorting loud protest, came to a rumbling halt, a smart roadster swung into the graveled parking space that fronted the tracks. A moment later a well-dressed little man slammed the door behind him as he sprang from the running board, and it was not until he was almost on me, with his hand outstretched, that I recognized my old friend.

Not that he looked so much different facially from the Wilbur Furley who said goodby to me a long ago, though, of course, he did look older. But the Wilbur I had known was a meek little fellow, a subordinate clerk at Fisher & Son, who carried his subordination into his house and among his friends.

Wilbur hadn't been able to afford any car, much less the snappy roadster he was leading me to.

"You shouldn't have taken the time off to pick me up, Wilbur," I said as we got into his car.

"No trouble, Charlie." He waved a depreciating hand. "My secretary'll take care of things while I'm out."

But what I couldn't understand and wanted to know was how that timid, underpaid bookkeeper had changed into this prosperous, energetic, self-confident executive.

I kept wondering about it while we drove the short distance to his home. It was a much more impressive place than the one he had had before I left town, and I was surprised and glad to see that he walked into it as if he owned it. I could remember how, under Martha's tyranny, he used to enter his house with the air of a servant coming in through the front entrance."

After dinner, over cigars in the library, I asked him about it bluntly.

He smiled. "So you'd like to know how Wilbur became Bill, and what the secret of my success is, eh?"

I nodded.

"I can almost explain it in one breath," Furley said. "But you'll be—uh—discreet about it, Charlie?"

"Of course," I promised readily.

"Well, it was the old office building, all right, and by the time I got there it was a pretty sad looking piece of lumber. Everybody had cleared out of the building and the street was jammed. Old Man Fisher saw me just as I came around, and ran over to me."

Furley chuckled. "The Old Boy was excited, what I mean. He wanted to know if I'd posted the sales for the week yet, and when I told him I hadn't because I always did it on Thursdays — the fire was on a Wednesday, you see—why, he let out a roar.

From what he said I gathered that he'd just found out that the accountant had been referring to the bill book while I was out to lunch, and that he'd forgotten to put it back with the other books in the steel safe. If the bill book was burned there'd be no record left of close to $18,000 worth of little sales for the week."

"This is what happened next," he said. "Read it yourself."

It was an account of the fire and most of it had to do with the heroism of Mr. Wilbur Furley.

I returned the clipping open-mouthed. Furley held up his hand modestly while I tried to voice my praise.

"Well," he continued, "the next day, while I was still in the hospital, Old Man Fisher himself called there, and after a long monologue about loyalty and the rest of it, he told me that when they opened their new offices I could have the accountant's job and that there'd be a $20-a-week raise to go with the promotion. Within a year I was advanced again, and after that I began stepping out in society."

I hesitated a momnt, but my curiosity overcame any delicacy I might have had. "There's still one thing I don't understand——"

"And that is," Furley put in, "how I suddenly found the courage to do the splendid deed, isn't it?"

I nodded.

"I'll tell you, Charlie," he chuckled, "but nobody else knows it and nobody else will."

"Before I left the office for lunch that day, Martha called me on the phone from her sister's and gave me the daily list of groceries to take home with me in the evening.

"I was at my desk when she called, but there wasn't any paper handy, and I knew Martha would get angry if I kept her waiting even for a minute, so I jotted the list down lightly in pencil on the flyleaf of the bill book. You see, we didn't have a phone then, so I couldn't call her back, and when Old Man Fisher told me that the bill book would be burned, I did the most cowardly thing I've ever done in my whole cowardly career—I risked the life of a husband and father to save the list of groceries rather than take a tongue-lashing from Martha."

"All that I am, and all that I hope to be, I owe to sound judgment, ceaseless energy, clean living and high ideals. I went to work at the age of 27, as an office boy. I never failed to take up a collection among my fellow workers to buy a birthday present for the boss. When anyone cheated, by arriving late at the office, or tried to smoke on the company's time, I made a note of it and placed the memorandum on my employer's desk. During the busy season I was always first to suggest that we all come down evenings and Sundays rather than waste our time on questionable pleasures. Soon I was placed in complete charge of postal distribution and inter-department communication and so it was I made my first dollar stamping postage stamps off the outgoing mail."

He Asks For It and Gets It

We hate to network the news along but the government sadly admits that its blue sky laws are no more use than a whalebone at a nudist colony.

The blue sky legislation was supposed to protect the gullible public from the predatory stock salesman. It was a protection for the sucker against the shark-fanned lad who sold you a live grizzly in a cave and furnished the blueprints. All you had to do was go in and claim your property.

The government says its failure to click is due to lack of prosecution. Quite a few federal operatives have caught up with the high pressure salesmen. But, after a short, sharp struggle, the Feds all come home with stock bloer than a Whistler twilight.

Those blue skyers could peddle you half-interest in a downstairs waterfront in a flooded mine. How do they do it?

It's because the sucker wants to be taken. That's why they have brass rings on carrousels and put whistles in pop corn bags. That's why gypsies get sunburned leaving the immediate vicinity while the sucker sleeps with a head of cabbage under his pillow.

He is sure that it will be a million dollars in the morning. That's why Indians trade horses in the dark, and stock certificates have gold edges.

That's why real estate agencies only work on sunny days and that's why baseball pools are born. It's the words and music for the street pitcher who sells you a watch for 10 cents and makes a dime on the sale. The Army, Navy and the Marines cannot protect a sucker even though they wrap him about in a blanket and change the guard every five minutes. Some high-powered salesman will get to him and sell him a certificate for a new system of making post holes in a swamp.

You can dig post holes in a swamp very easy. They fill up again much easier. But it doesn't say so in the document. All it claims is that it is a cinch. And it is. You cannot arrest a man for telling the truth. And that's why you cannot protect a mugg any further than you can throw soup with an egg beater.

It's his nature to be taken as easy as a Chinese trench in wartime. It's his lifelong habit, and salt won't save him. The government may make it illegal. But it will never make it unpopular.

Mugs and bunions were made to be trimmed. If you go a little too deep, it may be painful. The right way is to skim a little off the top and nurse both the sucker and the bunion for life.

Celebrate Safely!

Independence Day Can Be Observed Patriotically Without Fireworks

Three persons were treated at the Homestead Hospital for firecracker burns received in a premature celebration of the Fourth of July. An 11-year-old Vandergrift boy has suffered a serious injury to his left eye from a similar cause.

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness reports, for example, that by actual count it was found that more eye accidents occurred on or about July 4 than during any other hundred days of the year.

Elaborate programs of pageantry, song and oratory have been arranged for the celebration of the Glorious Fourth in the Pittsburgh district.

Cleaner Streets

The Highway Bureau Has Undertaken a Commendable Campaign in the Hill District

One of the serious reproaches that has been brought against municipal administrations in Pittsburgh year after year is being removed through the campaign launched by the Bureau of Highways and Sewers to clean up untidy streets in the Hill district.

It has been the custom in some of the slums of the Hill to throw ashes, rubbish and even garbage in the street. Certain thoroughfares in that district have been almost always offensive both to the eye and the nose.

Such conditions not only are degrading to those forced to live among them, but are a menace to health. It is to the advantage not only of the slum dwellers, but of all residents of Pittsburgh that the streets be made clean and sanitary.

We trust that the Highway Bureau will not spend all its energy on the Hill district, but will direct its attention to slums in other sections of the city, too.

Elizabeth's Centennial

The Old Town Shows Youthful Vim in Celebrating Its One Hundredth Birthday

In the old days, before the railroads were built, the Borough of Elizabeth was perhaps better known to the world than it now is; for the rivers then were the principal arteries of travel, and Elizabeth was noted as the home of river captains and the seat of an important boat-building industry.

But let no one suppose that Elizabeth's glory lies in the past. Although an old community—much older than most American towns—it is far from being old in spirit.

The vigor and enthusiasm with which the people of Elizabeth are celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the town's incorporation as a borough bear witness to a youthful spirit that will carry the community to still greater things.

Our hearty congratulations to Elizabeth on the centennial and on the progressiveness of its citizens!

Excellent Teachers

The High Quality of the Instructors Is a Bright Spot in the School Situation

In pleasant contrast with much of the news that has emanated lately concerning the public school situation is the report of the State Department of Public Instruction as to the qualifications of Pennsylvania teachers.

Ninety-eight and eight-tenths per cent of all public school teachers in Pennsylvania have attained standard certification or better, it is stated. This means that practically all but one in every hundred public school teachers have had two or more years of training beyond the high school in preparation for the teaching preparation.

Even in the rural districts, where 13 years ago less than half of the teachers had standard certification, 97.6 per cent now have this rating.

The gloom of schools forced to curtail their terms and otherwise deprive children of educational opportunities because of financial stress is slightly relieved by this assurance that the youngsters, at any rate, have the advantage of being taught by persons much better qualified than many of the teachers of more prosperous times.

Sauce for the Gander

The Allegheny, Too, Should Get the Benefits of Storage Reservoirs

Maj. W. D. Styer, head of the Pittsburgh office of the United States Army Engineers, enumerates flood control, reduction of acidity in the river water, better sanitation and improved navigation as boons that the Tygart River dam and storage reservoir now being constructed by the Public Works Administration will bring Pittsburgh and the Monongahela Valley.

We believe that Mr. Styer has not exaggerated one bit.

But it is difficult to understand, in view of the benefits that the storage reservoir will bring the Monongahela, why the Allegheny, also an important stream, and also in need of these benefits, has been slighted.

Beautiful Pennsylvania

The New 'Pinchot Roads' Now Make Many Attractive Places Accessible

No state has more attractive scenery. The landscapes that meet the eye in the Juniata, Susquehanna, upper Delaware and upper Allegheny valleys are idyllic.

Those who think they already are acquainted with all of Pennsylvania's beauty spots are mistaken. There are numerous lovely nooks and secluded valleys which have hitherto been inaccessible to motorists, but have just been opened to the world through the building of the so-called "Pinchot roads."

The roads are well marked, and the State Highway Department has recently issued, for free distribution, a map that is a treasure of useful and interesting information.

O Freedom, You whose sacred name was heard
In Independence Bell—Earth's greatest Word!
On Bunker Hill your Sons came forth to give Their Lives that You might live.

Freedom, for seven long, hungry, barefoot Years
You urged our Heroes on through Blood and Tears,
Till our embattled and victorious Bands
Strengthened your Conscripts battling in all Lands.

It was your glowing Breath
That kindled Life under the ribs of Death.
It was your dauntless Dream
Sent bright Hopes flying to the World's Extreme.

You flamed on Parliament; your Beauty lit
The stately Halls when the undaunted Pitt,
Impassioned and unpurchasable, cried
Your Cause, God's Cause, and would not be denied.
His Words leaped, thundering with clenched Fist:
"Rise, rise, outraged America . . . Resist!
For if you falter, if your Dreams go by,
Our English Liberty will also die!"

And now, O Freedom, Mother of Starry Truth,
All Shores begin to feel your Fire of Youth.
Now on all Winds are heard
The new Reverberations of your Word.
Your Banner is unfurled; we lift glad Hands;

Death Ray Enters News Again—Husband in Trunk Murder Case Dies—Mint Rushes to Meet Demand

By Edwin C. Hill

THE death ray comes to the front again. This time Dr. Antonio Longoria, of Cleveland, is credited with the invention of a machine which projects electric waves fatal to animals. Within the last few months an Englishman reported a like devise and now is supposed to be extending his research under the patronage of the government.

Dr. Longoria was to have demonstrated his machine before the National Inventors' Congress in Omaha, but it was withdrawn and a statement was made by A. G. Burns, president of the Congress, that federal authorities had asked that it be suppressed, a statement to which the inventor agreed. Mr. Burns said:

"I saw this machine work last October in Cleveland. Government scientists were there also. When Dr. Longoria turned the machine on rabbits, cats and dogs, they fell over instantly killed and their blood was turned to water."

Soon after the World War, the first death ray device was announced. At that time the Matthews invisible ray received much notice in England, where a prominent scientist discounted it with this statement:

"The whole gamut of ether rays is known to us without any gaps and consequently this leaves no place for the new ray, which, it is claimed, has been discovered."

Science does know of lethal waves sent out from the sun, which would make short work of this earth of ours if they could get to us. The atmosphere is our protector just as it is against meteors, and so long as the present atmospheric balance is maintained, we shall be safe from destruction by nature's own death rays.

Statement Saves James D. Farmer

THE death in Watertown, N. Y., of James D. Farmer at 69, closes the book on one of the most celebrated murder cases in the country's annals. Twenty-five years ago Farmer was in the death house at Auburn Prison with his wife, convicted of the murder of their neighbor, Mrs. Sarah Brennan.

Mrs. Farmer went to her death in the electric chair, the second woman in New York state to meet such a fate. Farmer's conviction was set aside and he went free, largely on the last-minute statement of his wife absolving him of any part in the crime.

The Brennans and the Farmers lived in the small village of Brownsville, near Watertown, N. Y. The Brennans were prosperous, and an envious desire to have their home possessed Mrs. Farmer.

On April 23, 1908, Mrs. Brennan disappeared and was last seen on her way to the Farmer house. That very day the Farmers went to Patrick Brennan and presented to him a deed for the transfer of the Brennan house made out to them, obviously by Mrs. Brennan, in October, 1907, for a consideration of $2,100.

The absence of Mrs. Brennan and the haste with which the Farmers pressed their claim aroused suspicion and a search was undertaken. This resulted in the discovery, four days later, of the body of Mrs. Brennan in a trunk which had been moved from the Farmer house, along with their other effects. A blood-stained axe also was found and it was with this that the murder had been committed.

"The Trunk Murder," as it was called, became a celebrated case. Interest was nation-wide as the horrible details came out at the trial. Homicides by women were uncommon a quarter of a century ago and a large section of the public shrank from the thought of a woman being put to death in the electric chair. But the state had an iron-clad case. It proved that Mrs. Farmer, months before the deed, had posed as Mrs. Brennan and had made out the papers for the transfer of the Brennan house to herself.

A defense of insanity failed to sway the jury which returned the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. The Court of Appeals refused to reverse this finding and the last recourse was to ask the Governor for a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

New York's chief executive at the time was Charles Evans Hughes. He refused to be swayed by the sex of the defendant or by the clamor of those opposed to capital punishment. In a lengthy opinion he found that "the murder was the most brutal and unattended by any circumstances affording the slightest basis for extenuation or appeal to sympathy on the prisoner's behalf."

On the night of March 28, 1909, Mrs. Farmer wrote out this statement in her cell:

"My husband, James D. Farmer, never had any hand in Sarah Brennan's death, nor never knew anything about it until the trunk was opened. I never told him anything about what happened. I feel he has been terribly wronged. James D. Farmer was not at home the day the affair happened."

Demand for Coins Presses Uncle Sam

UNCLE SAM'S money making plant in Philadelphia is hard pressed keeping up with the demand for quarters and pennies being made upon it by the Federal Reserve banks. Depression or no depression, the mint turns out about twenty-five million coins a year in addition to making money for South American countries and medals for the Army and Navy.

Metal bars, two feet long, four inches wide and an inch thick are rolled to 12 feet in length, stamped and put through a cutting machine which produces 300 coins a minute. This seems quite a lot, but when we are accustomed to talk of billions in budgets and war debts, the sum of one million, one hundred and ten thousand, two hundred dollars is quite insignificant.

Yet, in the last fiscal year, the mint had to produce three million, seven hundred and eighty-eight thousand quarters, and sixteen million, three hundred and thirty-two thousand pennies to make up that sum.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 3.—Riverside Drive became the liveliest summer stretch in town while the fleet was in. Sailors, like so many white topped cockatoos, perched the entire length of the stone wall that overlooks the Hudson. Sidewalks became a promenade for innocent strollers and nymphs who look back.

While there have been innumerable changes along Riverside the past 10 years, it is still "The Drive," with the Hudson sparkling below and the Palisades rising and purpling in sheer beauty. Its landmarks never change—Grant's Tomb, Inspiration Point. And Jacobsen, its burnt-black roadside photographer.

The old Claremont Inn, refurnished and scaling menu prices downward, now has Roger Wolfe Kahn and his band as a contrast to its usual sombre aloofness. The Drive is used as a metropolitan breathing space far more than Central Park. At night every bench is filled.

Hucksters of penny-wares, once unknown there, are in profusion. But there's ample compensation for growing tawdriness in grandeur of the Rockefeller church and its evening chime of the carillon and the breathless shimmer of the single span Washington Bridge in the moonlight.

Sinclair Lewis foils autograph collectors by declaring he is victim of a striking resemblance. He is an oil salesman from Oklahoma who happens to be lean, freckled and has red hair. Then he launches a terrible tirade against the man called Lewis, sprinkling it with acid epithets. It would be easier to confess his identity and sign on the dotted line. But the other way is more fun.

Nearest perhaps to the Flea Market of Paris in New York is the Rag Market on East 115th street. It's a dumping ground for the attic and cellar scavengings of some 5,000 Old Clo' men who roam the streets bargaining for the contents of rag bags. The best buys go to the second-hand men along Baxter street and the leavings to the Rag Market.

With much of Broadway going bare-headed, the street has been enlivened for several weeks by a battle of the hat shops. The most brightly lit stores along the thoroughfare, they open with jazz orchestras and free drinks. Windows are crisscrossed with autographed photos of screen and stage stars sporting various chapeaux. Babe Ruth and Harry Richman are reputed backing two stores.

The all night florist shop in Times Square always interested me. Of course, sales for midnight parties are understandable, but one imagines only a poet or a dawn die-hard would buy flowers in the early morning. Yet the proprietor says that even during depths of depression he has always been able to realize a small profit. Much comes from sales to stay-outs who take advantage of the chance to send peace offerings to wives. That adhesive phrase "Say it with flowers!" sticks among the philanderers.

I left a picture of Will Rogers, Irvin Cobb, Will Hays and myself at a framer's today. "I know Mr. Cobb, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Hays," he said, "but who is the other gentleman?" My wife responded "That is one of the Rogerses' stable hands." Which shows how a fellow can be framed twice in a row.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

If I Keep My Own Self-Respect

This matter of Conscience has always had me stymied. Even at the mature age of five it was obvious that life was a puzzling affair. But my Conscience—Mother and Sunday School Teacher assure me—would always tell me what to do. Conscience, they said, was something like an alarm clock. Only I didn't even need to wind it up. There it was, inside me—all ready to go off. And the very instant I started to do something bad, off it would go. Brr-r-r-r-r!

All of which listened lovely and was accepted without question. But presently doubts began to arise. Was it all really quite as simple as that? Could one so easily tell Right from Wrong? Maybe some people could, but I couldn't—

There was, for example, this question of snitching on the other kids. According to the Grown-ups, I should come Right Home and Tell if Jimmy Jones or Bessie Brown did something they shouldn't. But, on the other hand, according to my youthful contemporaries, I was a Dirty Mean Old Squealer if I Did.

So—what? Was Snitching right? Or wasn't it? Now, if ever, was the time for my Conscience to do its stuff. But my Conscience didn't! I could very plainly hear the admonitions of Mother and Dad. And even more clearly audible were the comments of Jimmy and Bessie. But there wasn't even a yip from my Conscience. So how was I to know?

Then again, even when my Conscience kicked up the worst rumpus, was that funny feeling in my tummy a sign that something was wrong? Or was it, maybe, just a sign that I was Afraid of Being Caught? For, even I could see that when I wasn't afraid of being caught, I had never a twinge—even though the affair was frankly criminal. But if punishment loomed, I immediately went goose-pimply with righteousness!

So what, if anything, did that imply? Was there maybe something wrong with me? Perhaps I didn't have any Conscience—just as some people are born without toes! Awful thought! And if I didn't—how ever was I to tell what was right or wrong? I didn't know!

And I still don't know! After 50 years of living, I'm as far from knowing absolutely what's right and wrong as I was at 10 or 20. And I'm still unable to decide whether I have or haven't a Conscience.

I realize that statement may shock many. And I suppose I should be ashamed to make it. But I'm not. For I've done my darndest to settle the question one way or the other. And it is only with extreme reluctance that I've been forced to come to the following conclusion, namely:

That much of those twinges we call "the voice of conscience" are nothing of the sort, but are merely the tweakings of our accumulated peeves, prejudices and fears.

Personally, I've spent agonizing hours waiting for that guiding voice. Only to be no better off when it came. For how'd I know whether I was in the grip of godliness—or merely of my own laziness, selfishness, cowardice and stupidity? I didn't!

It was only too evident that the old idea of an Alarm Clock Conscience was just another pretty fairytale. And yet I did have something upon which I could depend—

I had my own self-respect. And if I two-timed my own self-respect, it told me so in no uncertain terms.

I realized, of course, that my self-respect wasn't infallible. It was instead painfully limited by my own weakness and stupidity. But it was the best I had.

So, in place of that mythical Conscience which never worked, I now check by my own Self-Respect. It isn't easy. Many a time, the act upon which my Self-Respect insists, defies convention and raises Cain with my comfort and convenience. Often I have lost the respect of others in trying to save my own . . . and paid bitterly.

And yet—I've never been really sorry. For when all is said and done—I must live with myself. I may fool everyone else—alibi, bluff or come to shabby compromise with any other partner. But if I can't Come Clean in my own dealings with myself, life's a washout!

Educators Face Problem At National Conference

By James T. Williams, Jr.

ALL educational roads from the north, south, east, and west lead this week to Washington, where the National Education Association is holding its seventy-second annual meeting.

Twelve thousand members of this vast voluntary organization of citizens engaged in education work and aiding in the advance of education are expected to attend this meeting at which "educating for tomorrow" is the chief subject of discussion.

It is high time to take thought for education's tomorrow in this country. The economic depression has delivered a body blow to the American system of education. Compelled by decreasing revenues to reduce expenditures, state, county and local governments have struck at education instead of modernizing the obsolete system of county and local government from which nearly every state in the union suffers today.

Public schools all over the country have been closed, school terms have been shortened, teachers have either gone unpaid or have been subjected to reductions in salaries, in order to pay the wages and expenses of the thousands of politicians that this obsolete system of county and local government keeps on public payrolls.

* * *

We Must Abolish Ox Cart Government

EDUCATING for tomorrow—is a task that will be under an increasing handicap until this obsolete system of county and local government is modernized to meet the needs of a new day.

This system, as President Roosevelt has truly said, is an inheritance from the days when the ox cart was the chief means of transportation in this country. It is as much out of place today in the field of government as is the ox cart in the field of transportation.

But as the President has also said, the people cannot look to the politicians to get rid of the ox cart system of government. Politicians live by this system. They fatten on it. The more politicians on the public payroll the greater is the grip of the politicians on the throat of government and on the purpose of the people.

At a citizens' conference on the crisis in education, which the federal government assembled in Washington at the beginning of the depression, these timely declarations of policy then made may well be reiterated by the representative body of American educators now meeting in the federal city:

Education is a necessity, not a luxury, because the growth of the child cannot be halted or postponed during an economic emergency. Therefore, educational service should be accorded a high degree of priority in determining the purposes and services which shall be supported by the state during a depression.

"The major wastes in education should be eliminated through the abolition of the control over, and interference with, education by politicians, of political appointments and of political corruption.

"Local school governments and local school districts should be reorganized and consolidated.

"Administrative control of the schools must be centralized in the superintendent.

"State administrative organization of education must be reorganized through the creation of a non-political and professional agency for the administration of the educational policies of the state, where such agencies do not already exist.

"The state must assume the responsibility within its means of assuring adequate public education to all local communities, irrespective of their financial condition."

Nation Needs New Department

UNDER THE American system of government the support and control of education is a primary function of the state. The fostering leadership of education, its advance by means of research and by the distribution of the fruits of research to the several states, is an inescapable responsibility of the federal government. These two responsibilities can neither be exchanged nor merged.

The states can best do their part by giving people "fewer politicians and more and better schools."

The federal government can best do its part by restoring the Department of Education which once existed and placing at its head a Secretary of Education with a seat in the cabinet of the President.
